BIG GERMAN CRUISER REPORTED SUNK

HUNT DOCTOR INDICTED FOR ARLINGTON GIRL'S DEATH

Quick Action by Suffolk Grand Jury in Tragedy of Miss Irene A. Richardson, the 22-Year-Old Daughter of Town Auditor

"No Bill" Returned Against Hyde, Accused as Accessory; Nurse Under Bail on Similar Charge Is Surrendered by Bondsmen

With a secret indictment warrant as their authority, the Boston police are making a vigorous search for a Massachusetts avenue physician who is accused to having administered illegal medical treatment that caused the death in the Symmes Hospital, Arlington, last Thursday noon of Miss Irene A. Richardson, twenty-two-year-old daughter of George McKay Richardson, the Arlington town auditor.

After hearing ten witnesses yesterday the Suffolk Grand Jury returned a secret indictment against this physician before Judge Dana. An indictment warrant was immediately issued to the police, who renewed the search that has been made for this physician. The police say they believe the physician is in hiding.

Detailed description of the accused practitioner has been sent broadcast. The police hope to make an arrest soon.

The same Grand Jury of Suffolk, which secretly indicted the physician, returned a "no bill" in the case of William J. Hyde of Arlington, who is already charged in Cambridge District Court with being an accessory before the fact to the alleged medical treatment upon Miss Richardson. Hyde was one of the persons summoned to testify before the Suffolk Grand Jury. He came to the courthouse but refused to testify and went away.

NURSE IS SURRENDERED.

Hyde is thirty-five years old, married, the father of three young children and a near neighbor of the Richardson family. He is employed as bookkeeper by the Harvard Co-operative Association in Harvard square, Cambridge.

After the Grand Jury proceedings on the Boston side of the Charles River a new note of interest came from the Middlesex County jurisdiction on the Cambridge side, where Mrs. Marie Hanson, the nurse, accused in the case, was surrendered to the police by her two bondswomen. Mrs. Hansen has a flat at No. 282 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge. When she was arrested last Thursday night she was bailed out in $2,500 by Misses Delia and Annie Watson, sisters, living on Moreley street, Roxbury.

After the Cambridge Court hearing Friday, when Mrs. Hansen was held for a continuance on a charge of being an accessory after the fact to the alleged medical treatment of Miss Richardson, the Watson sisters renewed the bond.

Yesterday the Cambridge police received instruction that Mrs. Hansen was to be surrendered by her bondswomen. Inspector Welch immediately went to Mrs. Hansen's flat and took her in custody again. She was taken to East Cambridge jail.

The details were told for the first time yesterday of how the dying girl was taken from Mrs. Hansen's flat to her home in a rented automobile, summoned by one of Irene's two sisters. The chauffeur, Benjamin Converse, was alarmed at Irene's shocking pallor and weakness. Converse balked at taking the girl away at first and says that he was told by Mrs. Hansen that she was ill with pneumonia and must be taken home. So the chauffeur complied with the request.

It is also said that after Irene had undergone the illegal medical treatment which, the state alleges, took place at the Back Bay office of the indicted physician, the girl was allowed to go alone, in a trolley car, to Cambridge and to the flat of Mrs. Hansen on Massachusetts avenue in the city across the Charles River.

The time of the operation is not set. Irene left her home on New

Billy Sunday to Boston:

FALL ON YOUR KNEES AND REPENT OF YOUR SINS

Evangelist Chides Us

"If Boston Would Fall on Her Knees, with Tears of Repentance, It Would Change Religious and Moral History of New England," He Declares

Noted Revivalist, Invited to the Hub, Pays Respects to This City in the Course of Great Meeting in City of Philadelphia Before Fully 20,000 People

Says Cost of Making 420 Converts Was $100,000 in a Year, and Congregational Ministers Agree That He Is Probably Right When Interviewed in Boston

REV. "BILLY" SUNDAY

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—The Rev. William A. Sunday has been invited to conduct a Boston campaign against His Satanic Majesty.

The news came out tonight when, addressing the usual gathering of 20,000 Christians in the Auditorium, Evangelist Sunday declared his belief that "Boston is going to Hell!"

"If," said Sunday, while his auditors ejaculated "A-men," and Amen," and "Amen," "if Boston city should fall upon her knees, tears of repentance streaming down her face, it would change the religious and moral history of New England!"

In Boston, according to "Billy" Sunday, it cost $455 for every soul that joined the Congregational Church in the year 1910.

"I think the twentieth century way of preaching the Gospel is too cheap," declared the evangelist. "Take one instance: In 1910 thirty-three Congregational churches in Boston spent $200,000 for expenses. In the course of the entire year they had 420 join the church.

"In Chicago, the Congregational churches, numbering seventy-three, spent for current expenses $250,000, and had 876 join the church.

"For every soul that joined the church in Indianapolis it cost $620; New York, $545; Boston, $455; Denver, $435; Chicago, $429; New Orleans, $80; Atlanta, $75; Louisville, $65.

"In religion and morals, the South has the North beat to a frazzle! Fifty-two per cent. of the men who live South of the Mason and Dixon line are professing Christianity. North of the Mason and Dixon line, twenty-four per cent., along the Pacific Coast only six per cent.—and after most of them you can put the question mark!

"You pray with your lips, and you cheat in a horse trade! You kneel at the communion table, and then you oppress the poor and make them live below the hunger line! You sing for the glorification of God—and then you put the wrong figures in the Day Book! The bad sermons you preach with your daily life are more powerful than the most overmastering sermons any man can preach with his lips."

Prominent Boston Congregationalists agreed last night that, so far as the church in Boston is concerned, Mr. Sunday had his statistics nearly right.

The Rev. George L. Cady, pastor of Pilgrim Church in Columbia road, at Upham's Corner, said:

"There are thirty-four churches of the Congregational denomination in Boston and in 1910 they took in 877 members, of whom only 484 came in on confession. Home expenses that year amounted to $189,000."

Dr. Cady had no opinion to express regarding Mr. Sunday's other statements.

The Rev. A. Z. Conrad, of Park Street Church: "I do not know the exact figures, but I am quite sure Billy Sunday knows what he is talking about. He comes pretty near being right."

Little could be learned about the Sunday invitation to "come to Boston." It was recalled, however, that there was talk two years ago of a Sunday campaign in New Bedford. Nothing came of the New Bedford talk.

Roosevelt and Taft Arrive Here on the Same Train

The only two living former Presidents of the United States, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Professor William H. Taft, arrived at the South Station late yesterday afternoon, on the same train. Neither knew of the other's presence on the train until they had left the station.

Professor Taft went directly to the Hotel Somerset, where he addressed the alumni of the Institute of Technology at their annual banquet. Colonel Roosevelt went to the home of Dr. William Sturgis Bigelow at No. 59 Beacon street. While driving from the station Dr. Bigelow informed the Progressive party founder that his successor in the presidential chair was a fellow passenger on the train. The Colonel smiled and expressed considerable surprise.

FIND BOY'S BODY UNDER RR. BRIDGE

Station Master D. W. Welch of the Woodland station at Newton discovered the body of a twelve-year-old boy under the Woodland street bridge yesterday. It is believed that the youth was stealing a ride on a Boston & Albany freight train and was swept from the top of a car as the train passed under the bridge.

The boy was dressed in black knee stockings, black shoes and a white sweater. The initials, "S. B. C.," were woven into the sweater.

CURLEY TO FIND EMPLOYMENT FOR 3,000 IDLE

HITS FITZGERALD'S SCHEMES

Mayor Curley took emergency steps yesterday to provide employment soon for over 3,000 men, but he also made it plain that he will not permit the erection of certain public buildings, authorized in the Fitzgerald administration, merely to furnish work for the unemployed.

In the latter connection the Mayor wrote to Howard Whitmore, executive secretary of the United Improvement Association, that he accords with the association's request that work be hastened on public improvements for this purpose.

He said that all public works authorized in his administration are now in process of construction and others shortly will be approved. But to this the Mayor added in his letters

TO PREVENT WASTE.

"Certain public buildings, authorized before I took office will not be erected until I have become convinced of their necessity. I think you must agree with me that works of doubtful necessity, or works not needed at all, should not be undertaken. I have no legal right to authorize the waste of public funds for any purpose. Therefore I shall do nothing on certain public buildings authorized before my time, which I think would provide luxuries, as we have difficulty enough in providing money for necessary things. I am strengthened in this resolve by the fact that the erection of public buildings provides less work for laborers, mechanics and artisans than the amount of money required would provide if spent for other improvements, such as street or sewer construction or repairs.

EMERGENCY STEPS.

The emergency steps taken by the Mayor to provide work, including orders for the plotting of Broadway, from Dorchester avenue to the Strandway, preparatory to installing 3,500 tree-beds at a cost of $10,000; for grading Mt. Ida playground at $2,2500, for beginning sewers at Dent street brook, West Roxbury, and Fanouil Valley Brook, Brighton, not later than Thursday; for installation of 1,500 sprinkler systems by the building department in down-town stores and dwellings, and for extension of high-pressure water service to the City Hospital and other institutions which desire that protection.

The Mayor proposed that the Chamber of Commerce be asked to urge its members to guarantee not to lay off any present employe and to try to employ at least one additional person.

He ordered that President Elliott of the New Haven Railroad be requested to put a large force at once at work tearing down the old Cove street bridge, a small crew being engaged there at present.

"This should furnish early employment for not less than 1,500 men, and a correspondingly large number of women and minors," the Mayor said when announcing his week-end program.

"Aside from the large number of additional employes that the city itself will need, if my suggestions to the Chamber of Commerce and the New Haven are adopted, the unemployment question, in large part, will be settled locally."

Resume Inquest on Death of W. P. Wall

The inquest into the death of William P. Wall of East Boston, whose body was found in the water off Wood Island Park, November, was resumed at the East Boston Courthouse yesterday. The hearing was private. The medical examiner's report was offered giving the cause of death as drowning, due to a compressed fracture of the skull. The police are of the belief that Wall's death was accidental.

PROMISE BY BRITAIN TO LIMIT SHIP SEIZURES

Liberal Concessions Believed to Have Been Made to American Public Sentiment in Reply of Sir Edward Grey to U. S. Note.

State Department Officials Appear Satisfied with Contents of British Document, Which Will Be Published Tomorrow Morning

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The printed text of Sir Edward Grey's reply to the United States' note on shipping seizures was sent to President Wilson at 5 o'clock this evening. At the same time a batch of printed copies under the seal of secrecy was given to Ben Davis, chief clerk of the State Department, for distribution tomorrow afternoon.

State Department officials were plainly pleased by the tenor of the British reply. Secretary Bryan was beaming with satisfaction when representatives of the press called on him to ask for information as to the contents of the note.

The secretary said that he could make no comment on the note previous to its being made public, which would be for the papers of Monday morning.

Other officials in the State Department, with their chief, were radiant but reticent.

But while no high official would make any definite statement as to the contents of the note, the consensus of opinion among these officials in the department seemed to be that Sir Edward Grey had made fairly liberal concessions to the American sentiment.

PROMISES REPORTED.

It is understood that he promises on behalf of Great Britain to reduce seizures to the minimum.

The statement was made very frankly by an official today that this government necessarily take into consideration the nervous condition of British warships, their constant lookout for submarines, disciplined vessels and the possible entrance into English ports of a real enemy by German trickery.

Sir Edward Grey's presentation of the exigencies of the war claims that comparatively few ships have been taken into prize courts, and that a percentage of only 7½ or more vessels have been detained out of a total of nearly eight hundred cleared for Scandinavian points and Holland are admitted to have some weight.

The whole theory of Sir Edward Grey is one of expediency on the part of Great Britain, a desire for the continuance of rational settlement of disputes raised in the Bryan note, and an appeal to the good sense of the United States in view of the embarrassment of the allies.

EXPECT BRIEF TO BE SENT.

It is expected that a brief will be sent by the State Department to the British foreign office acknowledging the good intentions of the British government. It is understood that the larger questions of what is contraband and the absolute right of a government to impose its ideas on that subject on other nations, will be discussed hereafter by Great Britain and the United States.

The disposition tonight was to accept Sir Edward Grey's exposition of present conditions in good faith, but to test it as cases may arise. That cases will arise is not doubted here. Sir Edward Grey does not yield anything on the question of the right of search to the limit and on the British view to declare what is contraband.

CZAR'S COUSIN, GRAND DUKE ALEXANDER, IS KILLED IN BATTLE

Member of Russian Royal Family Recently in America and a Society Lion

BERLIN, Jan. 9. (Wireless via Sayville.)—The Imperial Press Bureau makes the following announcement:

"An official statement from Constantinople says Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, brother-in-law of the Czar, was killed in the fighting at Miandab (Merlemetabab) in the province of Azerbaijan Kurdistan in Persia.

Grand Duke Alexander was not only a brother-in-law of the Czar of Russia, but also he was a second cousin.

He visited American in the Fall of 1913, and was a guest of Mrs. John Astor at Beechwood, Newport. His mission to this country was a secret one, according to reports at the time, and had to do with the placing of a large order for a rapid fire, air cooled automatic aeroplane rifle for the Russian government.

Before the war he was mentioned as the probable commander-in-chief of the Muscovite forces, but his bent was naval.

There was none who enjoyed such a great amount of influence over the Russian Emperor as this energetic and progressive scion of the House of Romanoff. He was a determined champion of peace and his advocacy of peace plans is believed to have influenced the Czar to appoint Grand Duke Nicholas to command his forces in preference to Alexander.

The Grand Duke was forty-four years old. He was the fourth son of Grand Duke Michael and grandson of Nicholas I. His mother was the Princess of Baden. The Grand Duke was tall, dark, with aquiline features and was unusually handsome. He married when quite young the Emperor's sister and they had six children. They enjoyed the distinction of being almost the only grand ducal couple who lived on terms of loyalty to each other. Their home was at Peterhoff, near the palace of the Czar. He was reckoned one of the wealthiest members of the imperial family. While in America he made himself a strong advocate of woman suffrage.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A rumor reached this city tonight that there had been a battle off the South American coast between the German and British battle cruisers, Von Der Tann and Invincible, in which the former was sunk.

The Von Der Tann was reported recently to have broken through the British North Sea cordon and to have headed for the western Atlantic waters to enter on a career as a raider of commerce.

The battle cruiser Invincible is a sister ship to the Inflexible. She carries eight twelve-inch guns, sixteen four-inch guns in the superstructure, and four torpedo tubes. She has a complete Krupp armor belt, is of 41,000 horse power, has a speed of twenty-five knots, and a displacement of 17,500 tons. She was built in 1907.

The battle cruiser Von Der Tann is closely related to the Goeben and Moltke. She carries ten eleven-inch guns in pairs in turrets, ten six-inch guns in batteries, and sixteen 3.4-inch guns and four torpedo tubes. She has a complete Krupp armor belt, is of 43,000 horse power, a speed of twenty-five knots, and a displacement of 18,000 tons. She was built in 1907.

RUSSIANS SWEEPING OVER BUKOWINA AND INTO TRANSYLVANIA

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Austria at present occupies the most critical position of all the nations engaged in the great war that is raging in Europe.

Today's dispatches from the east show the capitals emphasize four great points of danger to the empire of Francis Joseph. They are:

FIRST—The Russian sweep across Bukowina, invading Hungary and Transylvania.

SECOND—Roumania's hurried preparations for war, as an ally of Russia, in order to get the neighboring Transylvanian provinces which are largely populated by Roumanians.

THIRD—The peril of Italian intervention, now likely at any moment as a result either of the Albanian crisis or as the consequence of Turkey's failure to meet the Italian ultimatum growing out of the Hodeida incident.

FOURTH—The threatened invasion by the Servian arms from the south.

SOARING WHEAT PRICE MAY BOOST THE COST OF BREAD

Big Boston Bakers, However, Declare There Is No Immediate Danger of a Six-Cent Loaf.

Mrs. Housewife of Greater Boston will be able to buy her bread for a nickel a loaf for a spell yet, but no one knows what may happen if wheat continues to go up in price, making flour proportionately higher.

Boston master bakers seemed to agree yesterday that an increase in bread is not an immediate prospect, but they hinted darkly at what may happen to the price if the raw materials don't quit their upward trend.

Economists, grain men, shippers, bakers and others interested in the financial moves of wheat and flour have been greatly concerned over the bull market in wheat and the jump in flour prices.

But housewives did not take much notice until a sudden talk of "six-cent bread" buzzed up and down the community.

Then Mrs. Newlywed, wrestling with the novel problem of the "store bill," and "Mother," who has to feed the bread bills for "Pa" and the little ones, began to say: "Merry bread going up, too!"

Wheat may go the speculative limit in the Chicago "pit" and flour and climb to thirteen bits, but the housewives are immediately concerned with what the Boston baker is going to do about it.

"NO IMMEDIATE DANGER."

C. S. Hallaway of the Hallaway Bakery Company of Cambridge, which turns out 15,000 loaves daily, says:

"There is no immediate danger of six-cent bread. We are not raising our price. We bought flour many months ahead at a reasonable price. We have enough now at lower unit. May. We bought flour many present price per barrel.

"I believe that the actual failure is going to have a hard time of it. The little retail dealer cannot pay the present price on flour and sell his product at the market price with any profit.

"If flour should go up another two dollars, as it has in the last two months, I hardly know what we should do. I think we might have to shut up shop."

The superintendent of the Ward Baking Company's Cambridge plant, part of a string of bakeries turning out over 2,000,000 loaves a day, says:

"NO RISE AT PRESENT.

"There will be no rise in bread at present. We buy in such large quantities that local fluctuations do not affect us greatly.

"It is not a matter for immediate alarm. One need not fear a higher price for the loaf at present.

"Of course, if this European war continues indefinitely, who can tell knows what may happen."

The Bakers' Company, which bakes 8,500 loaves daily, announces that there is no immediate thought of raising the price.

More alarming reports from the wage-earners' points of view come from New York and other of the largest cities of the country.

H. M. Taylor, secretary of the Shults Bread Company of New York, was quoted yesterday as saying:

"If the upward trend in flour continues we shall first advance bread to six cents. If flour goes still higher bakers will be forced to charge seven or eight cents a loaf to make a profit."

Chinese ginsengs said that the bread bowls are about ready to make a flight upward.

Hardly encouraging, either, is the statement from Washington of Charles J. Brand, chief of the Federal Bureau of Markets, who says that weather forecasts point to a crop that is not an immediate prospect but they hinted darkly at what may happen to the price if the raw materials don't quit their upward trend.

Girl of 19 Is Third to Elope Now Bride of Young Lawyer Known as Berkshire Belle

MISS O'BRIEN ASHE

Kathryn Streeter, Like Mother and Sister, Runs Away to Get Married.

NORTH ADAMS, Jan. 8.—O'Brien Ashe, son of one of the Pittsfield attorneys and a Yale graduate, and granddaughter of a millionaire manufacturer who is Adams, have eloped, and a romance brought the news to their friends here today. Mr. Ashe stepped to the street fountain for Mr. and Mrs. Ashe elevated the girl's parents, came out hatless and coatless, and hurried to the home of Kathryn's sister, closed with Patrick Whalen, a Yale College student.

Young Ashe is a student at Georgetown Law School in Washington, D. C., and has left for that city. The girl's parents knew of her affection for young Ashe, and made every effort to break up the match. They refused to discuss the affair. There were interesting developments, however, when some reporters, overhearing, also laughed at locomotive after his car-mates had left for the train.

Ashe was at home for his Christmas holidays. The girl was teaching school at Sand Centre. Last Thursday she left her home for a short vacation. She was expected home on Friday. On that day Ashe left home, ostensibly to return to Georgetown.

Instead, he hired a team and drove to Savoy Centre, met the young girl and thence they drove to Charlemont and took a train for Troy. From Troy she went to Albany, where she was married with the word, "We are married, going to Washington."

Mr. Streeter at once telephoned to Mr. Ashe, and there was a family council. The girl is nineteen, and Ashe just short of twenty-one. Mr. Streeter is a deacon in the Congregational church and had opposed the marriage on religious grounds.

Ashe's father is a well-to-do attorney. His son at Georgetown has a five-room apartment and thither he will go with his bride.

The girl bride bears a reputation as one of the prettiest girls in Berkshire County. She is a graduate of Adams High School and North Adams Normal School. She belongs to the Forest Park Country Club, is a good golfer and was said to be a leader in the Adams Musical Society.

TECH MAN SAVES DROWNING BOY

Frank Murphy Plunges Into Icy Pond at Woburn and by Heroic Struggle Saves Joseph Ross.

Twelve-year-old Joseph Ross of Woburn was saved from drowning in the open channel of Horn Pond in Woburn yesterday afternoon by Frank Murphy, a Technology senior, who plunged fully clad into the treacherous channel after several other rescue men, forming a human chain to the edge of the ice, had failed to reach the struggling boy.

Murphy and the boy went under the surface once and for a few moments the spectators feared both would be lost.

Young Ross had been skating on the ice near the shore of the pond, but he finally began circling nearer the open-water channel until he went into deep water and drifted off the ice edge before he could stop himself.

His cries and the splash of water called other boys to the rescue. They extended themselves in chain fashion across the dangerous ice to the water. Those at the shore stretched out and they stuck to the drowning boy. But Ross seemed unable to help himself, even though the hockeys were within his reach.

Frank Murphy was sitting on the bank of the pond, with one skate on and one off. When he realized that the boy was in danger of drowning, Murphy, one of the world-be rescuers, Murphy half-ran, half-skated across the ice to the channel.

Disregarding the footweight of the skate he had on, Murphy plunged into the freezing water and seized hold of Ross. But the lad, with the instinct of self-preservation, grappled wildly at Murphy in such a way that the latter was momentarily helpless.

Murphy and the boy struggled, but he regained footing on the channel. Then they went under the surface. When they came up, Murphy, by tremendous physical effort, managed to release the boy's death-grip and hold him in control, while he struck out with his feet and one free hand for the ice.

After using pretty nearly the last ounce of his strength, Murphy brought himself and the boy to the edge of the ice, where he lifted him up to safety. Then Murphy climbed up on the ice unassisted.

Ross is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Ross of No. 79 Fowle street, Woburn. Murphy, who is twenty-one years old, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Murphy of Pleasant street in the same city.

INDICT DOCTOR IN ARLINGTON CASE

Year's Day, giving as an excuse to her father and mother that she was to visit some friends. It was Wednesday night when the girl was taken from Mrs. Hansen's flat to her own home, according to Chauffeur Converse, and it was then that the operation is placed at some time between these dates.

TEN WITNESSES HEARD.

After the Middlesex Grand Jury had been swiftly brought to bear on the tragedy, District Attorney William J. Corcoran of that county, decided to turn over his evidence to Suffolk County as the physician who is accused of the actual medical treatment practices in Suffolk and the crime which is alleged against him is believed to have taken place in Suffolk jurisdiction.

District Attorney Pelletier took up the case without delay, giving it to Assistant District Attorney Lavelle to handle.

Twelve witnesses were summoned. Ten were heard, as Hyde refused to testify and Mrs. Hansen did not appear.

The ten who testified were Police Chief T. O. D. Urquhart of Arlington, who took the girl's death-bed statement; Medical Examiner William D. Swan of Arlington, who performed the autopsy; Dr. Harold R. Webb, the Richardson family physician; Dr. Edwin C. Stickney, whom Dr. Webb called in consultation; Benjamin Converse, chauffeur of the rented car which conveyed the dying girl home; Chief Inspector Patrick J. Hurley of Cambridge; Inspector John F. Linton, William Rooney and George J. Bell of the Boston police, and Charles Irwin, Boston police stenographer.

The story of Benjamin Converse, the chauffeur, makes the tragedy of the girl seem all the more pitiable. Converse is employed by an Arlington man who rents automobiles on call. The Arlington and Cambridge police say that, when Irene felt herself growing very weak, she called up her own home on the telephone from Mrs. Hansen's flat, getting one of her two sisters on the telephone. This was last Wednesday evening.

THE DEATH TRIP HOME.

The sister went to Mrs. Hansen's and from there telephoned to the public automobile station for a car to take Irene home.

Converse's story is that he brought his car to the address given and found the girl waiting on the sidewalk. She said that she was on the watch there, lest the chauffeur could not find it easily. The girl was then carried into the house and soon came out supporting Irene by one arm. Mrs. Hansen, the nurse, according to Converse's story, had Irene by the other arm. Irene was deathly pale. Her eyes were closed. She could barely step.

Converse, in alarm, said: "This girl is awfully sick. Do you think it is safe to move her?"

Mrs. Hansen replied, Converse related: "This girl has pneumonia. She must be taken to her home at once."

Converse accepted this explanation. He helped lift the girl into the car. Irene's sister got in and the two girls, one dying, were driven to the Richardson home.

3 MEDFORD BOYS FIGHT FOR LIVES

One Falls Into Water Up to Neck and Others Go to His Rescue.

Daniel W. Connor, Jr., the seven-year-old son of Sergeant Daniel W. Connor of the Medford police, Henry F. Cox, Jr., thirteen, and his brother, Paul, eleven, had a narrow escape from death last night while hurrying to the Cox home at No. 15 Wareham street, Medford.

The boys had left the Connor home and were crossing the "Maine" playlot on College avenue. Paul, who was leading, slipped and fell into the water and was up to his neck when the Connor boy jumped in to rescue him. The two boys were soon struggling in the water and Henry, an expert swimmer, jumped in to assist the two.

Henry was lifted to the shore by his younger brother and the Connor boy and then the younger lad was pulled out by his brother. The two brothers then each took a hand of the boy remaining in the icy water and he was pulled to shore and the three went to the home of the Cox boys whereas well were given warm drinks.

The rescued boy was dressed in his Sunday clothes for Sunday School today and will remain in bed as a result of his experience.

1,500 Convicts Are Pardoned By Gov. Blease

Credited With Boast That Penitentiaries Will Be Empty When He Quits Office.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 9.—Full pardons to about 1,500 persons, convicted in this State of various crimes and paroled since January 1, 1911, was granted today by Governor Blease.

The chief feature of Governor Blease's administration has been his leniency toward those in penal servitude and his willingness to grant paroles and pardons.

The executive liberated convicts in batches of five and more irrespective of the seriousness of the crime for which they had been sentenced. He is credited with making the boast that he would leave the penitentiaries empty when he left the Governor's chair.

Although Governor Blease has never made any efforts to hide his hostility to negroes, he has not hesitated to liberate negro prisoners upon occasions.

A year ago Governor Blease received a Christmas gift of the pearl-handled knife from a notorious safe cracker whom the executive previously set free.

In an attempt to save his dog from drowning in the fish brook opposite Simmons College yesterday afternoon, George E. Thayer of No. 187 Hemenway street, Back Bay, nearly lost his life. The canine, which was a handsome Irish terrier, had fallen through the thin ice. Mr. Thayer tried to pull the animal out but fell into the water. He was rescued by Richard F. Gleason of Roxbury and George Keenan of Grove Hall.

'TOODLES' TO TELL ALL HER STORY

Ferncroft Inn Proprietor Expected to Be Called by the Defence.

Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan, central figure in the $50,000 breach of promise suit against Harry K. Mansfield, proprietor of the Ferncroft Inn, will again tell the stand that she cast a moonstone tomorrow, to conclude her story.

Mr. Mansfield, it is expected, will be a witness in his own defense this week. His counsel is Attorney Michael Sullivan, while Daniel H. Coakley and Daniel Daly are appearing for Miss Ryan.

The courtroom was thronged during the early days of the trial. Men and women spectators appeared in great numbers. Miss Ryan has always testified that Mansfield called her "Toodles" and "Grandma," but she called him "Grandpa."

BREAKS INTO TEARS.

At several points in her testimony Miss Ryan has broken into tears, and during cross-examination as to one of her visits to Mansfield's apartments she broke down completely. Miss Ryan is twenty-four years old. Her suit against Mansfield was filed more than a year ago and came to trial last Monday.

Attorney Coakley, in opening Miss Ryan's case, declared that he intended to prove that Mr. Mansfield "showered a few kisses" on Miss Ryan at the Hotel Lenox; that he wrote her letters filled with endearing terms, that he promised to wed her and then cast her aside.

Miss Ryan went on the stand Tuesday afternoon. She said she met Mansfield in 1907 and that he told her then that he cared for her. She had come to Boston to see the Harvard-Yale football game in December, 1907, and the party motored to Ferncroft Inn where she met Mr. Mansfield.

She said that Mr. Mansfield furnished her niekles to drop into the machines at Ferncroft. The next day she met Mr. Mansfield in Boston and had lunch with him. She testified he remarked that day:

"I've met a lot of girls in my time, but none of them looked as good to me as you do."

GLASS IN DOOR BROKEN.

On Wednesday a tremendous throng gathered in the court house and attempted to enter the court room. In the crush, a pane of glass in one of the doors of the courtroom was smashed. Miss Ryan resumed her testimony that day. She told of Mr. Mansfield to Bermuda, and another to Monte Carlo, and testified that he made a will leaving her $100,000.

She charged he used married cards in a game of bridge in which he had "gotten" $9,000 out of one man.

In the course of an argument over this evidence, Attorney Coakley said:

"I want to show that he broke his contract to marry this girl because she refused to continue as his partner in the use of marked cards."

Judge Fessenden sustained the testimony.

Miss Ryan told this story of a conversation she said took place in a Hemenway street apartment:

"We were sitting there. I said 'Grandpa, we've been together now about three and a half years. I thought as long as we were alone it was well for me to call his attention to the promise he made about marrying me. I told him he said he would marry me after so many times. I told him my mother, sisters, brothers and others thought we were making a mistake. He said as I can recollect, that he would marry me and to prove he was sincere in the matter, that he had made out a will in which he left me everything he had. He said the only girl to whom he left everything in a former will."

She testified that Mr. Mansfield gave her a brooch as his first gift; that on another occasion he took a diamond ring off his finger and gave it to her, and that he gave her two other rings at different times.

Miss Ryan was under cross-examination by Attorney Sullivan when court beginning on Thursday. She said that Mansfield's letters had received from Mr. Mansfield were burned in a fire at Ferncroft. She told of coming to Boston a few days after the first meeting with Mansfield and said he met her at the train. Then followed the astraining testimony that followed running thus:

Q.—Did you arrange to have your trunks and your wardrobe sent to Mansfield's room at the hotel? A.—No, I gave him my trunk checks.

Q.—Didn't you instruct him to send the baggage to his apartments? A.—No, he was a gentleman.

Q.—You did go to live with Mr. Mansfield at his residence, didn't you? A.—Yes. It was the event of my life.

Q.—How long did you intend to live with Mr. Mansfield? A.—I intended to live with him forever after certain things had happened. I'm glad the right thing.

BOUGHT HER A DRESS.

She testified that Mr. Mansfield bought her a dress, a green dress, and that it cost $75 and was marked down from $150. Was asked why, a little later, she went back to New York.

"Because Mr. Mansfield had to skip from Boston. You told him to skip, Mr. Sullivan. That's why I went back to New York."

There followed some queries as to a New York artist named Knoedler.

Q.—Do you remember telling Mr. Mansfield that Knoedler was "keeping eyed" and that you wanted to get rid of him? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you telephone to Mr. Knoedler from the hotel where Mr. Mansfield was with reference to a Simons which you left in Mr. Knoedler's apartment. A.—No, sir.

Q.—When you came to Boston, did you not receive your trunks from Knoedler? A.—No, sir.

Later cross-examination dealt with a trip to Boston when Miss Ryan said she visited Mansfield's apartments. She told of two successive visits to the apartments and there followed this testimony:

Q.—Now about your third visit? A.—I went alone.

Q.—Then you went through the place? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You went to the living room and spent an hour there, didn't you? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did he go with you? A.—He came with me.

The cross-examination then took up a detailed story of the occurrences of that day. It was during this visit that the witness broke down and was taken into an anti-room during recess. Afterward the remaining testimony was given.

Q.—Do you remember Miss Dunbar criticising you for going to Mr. Mansfield's apartment without a chaperon? A.—I do not remember.

Q.—Did you receive fifty dollars from Mr. Mansfield? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Do you remember getting from Mr. Mansfield a check for fifty dollars in 1907? A.—No, sir; on that visit he did not give me any money.

Miss Ryan's further testimony will come on Monday.

'Dick' Peabody Is Married

First Harvard '15 Wedding

MRS. RICHARD ROGERS PEABODY.

The first wedding in the Harvard Class of 1915, in which the spell of cupid proved too strong to be denied even until June class day, yesterday added another society bride to the old family society ranks of Boston and Cambridge.

At Manamoneck, N. Y., Richard Rogers Peabody yesterday took as his bride the attractive New York society debutante, Miss May Phelps Jacob, daughter of the late William Jacob and niece of Mrs. William M. Barnum.

Society here yesterday was preparing to receive Mrs. Peabody. The Harvard boys will offer enthusiastic congratulations to "Dick" Peabody, since he puts in an appearance following the honeymoon, it is honeymoon is possible for the young groom without endangering his chances of receiving a sheepskin in June. Can be done, the gold coast boys are asking.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob C. Peabody of the Myopia Club at Danvers. Mr. Peabody, Sr., is a member of the Somerset Club.

VILLA WINS BIG TORREON VICTORY

Carranza's Army Reported Beaten and in Flight—To Stop Border Fighting.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Ten thousand followers of General Villa, commanded by General Felipe Angeles, have decisively defeated a Carranza army near Torreon, according to dispatches from El Paso.

The followers of Carranza, who were commanded by General Antonio Villareal, are reported to have fled, leaving their dead and wounded behind.

Reports from El Paso say that General Villa promised today that he would put a stop to all fighting along the Mexican-United States border. This promise was made in the American customs house here to Brigadier-General Hugh L. Scott, U. S. A., with whom Villa had a long and amicable conference.

The Mexican chieftain said he would order General Maytorena to sign the agreement already signed by General Hill of the Carranza forces, neutralizing all border towns.

He also said he would abandon the plan of sending General Cabral's forces to attack the Sonora border towns and would send Cabral instead to invade the interior of Sonora and the west coast.

The fighting along the border has been a constant source of trouble ever since the Madero rebellion of 1911, and during the last two months more than fifty non-combatants on the American side of the line have been killed or wounded.

Hermit's Nephews Fight for Fortune

WORCESTER, Jan. 9.—George G. Osgood and Charles H. Osgood of Manchester, N. H., nephews of George D. Hayes, the eighty-year-old hermit who was burned to death here a week ago, have come to Worcester to fight for the fortune left by the old man.

The police have thus far located about $7,600 worth of property belonging to Hayes. Worcester banks have $4,000, Boston banks have $2,000 more; and there is $1,600 worth of Worcester real estate in the dead man's name.

The nephews believe Mr. Hayes' total will reach $25,000. They say there is real estate in Boston, and a substantial insurance policy. Yet to be accounted for, and to protect their interests, they have engaged Philip J. O'Connell, former mayor of Worcester.

Pulmotor Saves Baby Just Born

A pulmotor saved the life of a boy born to Mrs. Thomas Di Tullio, No. 79 Union street, Quincy. It is said this was the first time the pulmotor has been used to save a new-born infant.

Dr. Sidney C. Hardwick found the baby had a faint heart action, but no respiration. For an hour he used the ordinary emergency methods without success. He then telephoned Quincy police headquarters for the police pulmotor.

The apparatus was hurried to the home in the charge of Patrolmen George Phillips and Patrick Milford. Fifteen minutes' work brought spasmodic respirations and in an hour the breathing of the child was about normal. And then the tiny boy burst into his first bit of crying.

SULPHUR IS THE ONLY THING FOR ITCHING ECZEMA

Use Like Cold Cream to Subdue Irritation and Clear the Skin.

In the treatment of the various forms of disfiguring, itching and burning Eczema such as Acne, Ringworm, Salt Rheum, there is nothing known that can take the place of bold-sulphur.

It effects such prompt relief, even in the aggravated Eczema, that it is a never-ending source of amazement to physicians.

For years bold-sulphur has occupied a position of the first in the treatment of cutaneous eruptions by reason of its searching, parasite-destroying properties. Bold-sulphur is not only parasiticidal but antiseptic and germicidal, therefore invaluable in overcoming irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure, yet in every instance it instantly stops the agonizing itching; subdues the irritation and heals the inflamed, raw skin right to end. It is often years before any Eczema eruption again appears.

Those troubled should obtain from any good pharmacist an ounce of bold-sulphur and apply it directly upon the affected parts as ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded is very welcome.—This is published for Walter Luther Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Business Woman's Club Busy Hunting Mary's Lost Lamb

Mary lost her lamb—such as it was—right in the heart of the city last night, and it took all of the sixty members of the Boston Business Women's Club to find it.

The lamb, which wasn't a regular lamb at all, but just a very good imitation of one, disappeared at the club quarters on Bowdoin street. When the news of its disappearance spread through the building there was more excitement than you'll find at a three-alarm fire. The lamb was finally found hidden under a coat in the cloak room. How it got there remained a mystery until Mary, who was no one else than Miss Mary Blake, a prominent club member, recalled that she had inadvertently left it there herself.

Among the features was a big blackberry pie from which, in due season, flew twenty young women armed as the birds, a Twelfth Night cake which was cut by Miss Ethel G. Green of the Revere, and Miss Mary Kerrigan, who impersonated King Cole.

Miss Ida Fox was in charge of music. Blanche Goell and Mrs. Mabel Harlow, who appeared as Mother Goose.

Attempts were made to enter and arouse him yesterday morning, but when they proved futile, a bell boy entered the room by means of a fire escape and found the man lying dead on the bed. Medical Examiner A. H. Longfellow says that death was due to heart failure.

Plans Boom for Pilgrim Exposition in 1920

300th Anniversary of the Mayflower's Arrival

Three Bills to Go Before Legislators in Move to Honor Landing of Pilgrims.

The Pilgrim Society, the Society of Mayflower Descendants and other historical organizations, working hand in hand with the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and other groups of business men, have begun a campaign for a gigantic celebration in 1920 of the landing the Pilgrims at Plymouth.

Three bills for the recognition of the historic event 300 years ago are before the Legislature, and two of them contemplate a celebration, a world's fair, in or near Boston, which shall transcend anything ever held, even the Panama Pacific Exposition. John J. Martin, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, supported this project with the remark: "By then the war will be over. By that time the warring nations will have realized that for trade purposes they must get together again. And such a fair as we contemplate would serve to bring together—on American soil—business men of all the countries at war."

One of the bills presented this year to the Legislature bears the signature of Charles S. Judkins, secretary of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, and is formally indorsed by that exchange.

Another is signed by the following business men: William H. McMasters, Samuel H. Mildram, John J. Martin, Charles L. Burrill, Clarence A. Barnes, Thomas A. McQuade, Wayland M. Minot, Lawrence Mitchell, Otis A. Osgood and W. F. Casey.

"The third is sponsored by the Pilgrim Society, with the signatures of the following men: Arthur Lord, John D. Long, Winslow Warren, Greville H. Norcross and William S. Kyle.

"The bill formally indorsed by the exchange provides that the Governor and Council shall appoint a commission of five to arrange for a national exposition in Boston in the year 1920 in celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims. The commissioners' duties shall include plans for the preparation and exhibition at the exposition of the natural and industrial products of the Commonwealth, and of objects illustrating the history, progress, moral and material welfare during the past 300 years."

The commission is also to take steps to induce the co-operation and participation of the Federal government and of the governments and people of each State and of the territories and possessions of the United States, and of the governments and peoples of North and South America.

This measure carries an appropriation for expenses of $25,000, the commission is to report next year, the members to serve without pay.

CALLS FOR $300,000.

Senator Fay of Middlesex is sponsor for the exchange's bill, which has been introduced in the Senate. Senator Hays of Suffolk has introduced the bill drawn up by Mr. McMasters and others. This bill differs from that of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange in that it carries a $300,000 appropriation, to be divided among three years, and to cover the preliminary work for the great exposition.

The measure favored by the Pilgrim Society was introduced by Representative Churchill of Plymouth, and simply provides for the appointment of a commission to consider for a year the various plans for a celebration, and to report to the next Legislature.

"There may be some conflict between the historical societies and the Exchange on the question of whether a world's exposition is the best form of celebration of the tercentenary of the Pilgrims' landing.

President Arthur Lord of the Pilgrim Society said:

"Our proposal is simply that a commission be appointed to look the situation over. I am inclined to doubt whether an exposition such as is suggested would be the most appropriate form of celebration that could be chosen. But that, of course, would be one of the things for the commission to consider.

"The proposals for a 1920 celebration date back to 1912. I thought it was premature to do anything at that time; and as a matter of fact nothing definite has yet been done. This is the first year the Pilgrim Society has taken any steps in the matter.

"A committee report in 1916 will give four years for the necessary work of preparation. That is plenty long enough, surely.

"It may be that the Legislature will say it is too early even now to take any action, with a war going over Europe, and conditions so unsettled. But I believe it would be better to get things under way this year.

"Previous bills have proposed that certain state officials be appointed to the commission ex officio, but our bill leaves all that to the Governor. This celebration should be a State matter, and it is for the State to handle it.

"Among the celebration plans which have been proposed, besides this plan for a world's exposition, are that we have a pageant, that we erect a great monument, that we make some public improvements in Plymouth. The committee could consider all these plans.

"The Society of Colonial Dames is raising funds for a memorial. I believe, and the Red Men throughout the country are planning to erect a statue of Massasoit on Cole's Hill.

"Our society and the Mayflower Descendants will work together in this matter."

Secretary George Earnest Bowman of the Society of Mayflower Descendants confirmed this last statement. "We shall be with the Pilgrim Society," he said. "Our society is of course vitally interested in the proposed celebration. Boston and the Commonwealth should do big things to mark the year 1920.

"We have opposed any action in previous years, but now it seems time to set plans under way."

John J. Martin, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, whose name is signed to one of the bills, and who as head of the exchange is likewise supporting the exchange's bill, explained:

"A great big world's exposition in Boston in 1920 would be a fine thing for Boston and for the country, and for the world. We are old to have it, and the sooner we get things under way, the better.

WOULD BOOM BUSINESS.

"Boston, you know, needs friends. Boston is a manufacturing community, and so Boston must keep in touch with the supplies of raw materials, and also with the markets for finished product.

"Our function in the trade world is to bring raw stuffs here, manufacture them into finished product, and export the product. Such an exposition as this, by advertising the city and the entire New England section of the country, would furnish a basis for a tremendous business advance. The whole Atlantic seaboard ought to be considered in the plan. It ought to be a national celebration, not a local one.

"The farmers, the sheep men, the leather men—those men who send us our raw material—they would come on here to see what Boston had to show, and the result would be a much stronger feeling for Boston.

"Likewise the people who buy our products—and our shoes alone go into every town in the country—they would come on to see how the thing was done.

"It will be no trick at all to finance the thing. Why, when the Bankers' Convention met here they raised $110,000 just for the incidental expenses without trouble. A $50,000 convention fund would hardly notice. It's nothing at all. Once we start things going, this exposition will grow and grow—and Boston will grow with it.

"We can't afford to do this thing on a pinching scale. We want to interest the entire country.

THE PRISCILLA ALDEN OF TODAY APPLAUDS TER-CENTENNIAL

Mrs. W. B. Evans of Hyde Park, formerly Priscilla Alden.

Mrs. Webster B. Evans of No. 230 Fairmount avenue, Hyde Park, formerly Miss Priscilla Alden, and a descendant of John Alden, is enthusiastic over the plan for a great Pilgrim ter-centennial exposition in Boston in 1920. She says:

The movement for a ter-centennial celebration of the first permanent settlement of the Pilgrims in Plymouth will be highly appreciated by every one of the descendants, I am sure, and I for one really believe it is a splendid idea.

I feel sure that the Alden Kindred Association, of which I am a member, would be glad to take part in the anniversary and do their utmost to make it a grand success. While the association has very little funds, still they would be glad to assist in an important affair of this kind.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous
Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation stopped. This is the reason why a teaspoonful of bismuth magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation of the food, which causes the formation of acid. Such relief as you get from bismuth magnesia is obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy. Advertisement.

Monday and Tuesday---Our Greatest Sale

Women's and Children's Clothes All NEW—1-3 to 1-2 Off

IT IS TEN years since Filene's made merchandising history in Boston by purchasing the entire stock of the big Gross & Strauss store and placing it on sale at startling prices. For every January since then we have prepared a similar bargain feast under the name of G. & S. SALE.

THIS has been done not so much as a reminder of past achievement as a TEST OF WHAT WE CAN DO AT THE TIME—a test of our buying strength—a test of our selling abilities—a test of our service and general store organization—and a test of ever-increasing public confidence.

YEAR after year the business volume of this event has grown. The first G. & S. sale in the new store (1913) showed a total of almost double the previous high mark. Last January, although the weather was so severe that the second day's business was decidedly light, the total for three days showed a substantial gain over 1913.

Now comes another test—test of our whole organization to do the best it knows how—to meet the wardrobe needs of women and children with NEW apparel, made for us in the VERY LATEST STYLES.

Efficiency Baby--1915 Model--Doesn't Cry Too Much

DR. FRITZ TALBOT, WHO HAS EFFICIENTLY OBSERVED 150 INFANTS, TAKES STAND WITH GRANDMA—SOMEWHAT

Queen of Them All Is a Little Roxbury Girl

Authorities Find 95 Per Cent. of the Baby's Food Should Go to Heat, Weight and Activity.

MOLLY ERNEST, EFFICIENCY BABY, AND HER ACTION CHART FOR 12 HOURS

All motion, the infant heart-beats increase.

When the baby cries hard and according to Dr. Talbot, the feeding and waving of arms and legs, the pulse count runs up as high as 140 to 150 to the minute. But, when baby becomes quiet and falls asleep, the tell-tale pulse drops to 80 or 90 to the minute.

From a layman's standpoint, the task of applying efficiency engineering tests to babies would be nothing short of colossal.

From the standpoint of the scientist, who counts no labor too long or arduous if new facts are learned and new laws of human life are established, the task is long, to be sure, but more than worth while.

If Dr. Fritz Talbot is an efficiency engineer on babies, Miss Molly engineering mate is a tremendously sensitive apparatus called a calorimeter, which is set up and in operation at the Massachusetts General Hospital. The AMERICAN described this apparatus last Sunday. The work is being done under direction of the Carnegie Institute of Washington. Briefly the observations of babies, of their museum for activity, their breathing, pulse rates, their radiations and other physiological activities, as made possible by the calorimeter and by recording instruments, are extremely scientific.

In their own "baby talk" the experts like to have normal, healthy babies. In the past three years Dr. Talbot—for he has been a long, long way on the efficiency road—has made observations with the calorimeter apparatus of 150 babies.

One of the best of the lot for the purpose of efficiency observation is Molly Ernest. When Molly made she weighed ten pounds and ten ounces, and she was as hearty a young person as ever drew breath.

Molly was as normal as they make before she was introduced to and into Dr. Talbot's calorimeter. The good physician was particularly pleased, for he had secured a babe that seemed to him about as perfect a subject for such a job as humanity could produce.

Molly was as normal as they make 'em, so to speak. She [illegible] in the calorimeter in almost complete quiet, sleeping, naturally, and reposing in blissful peace in her periods of being awake.

Mrs. Ernest came in for due praise for her fine baby. She is naturally proud of Molly. She has followed carefully Dr. Talbot's directions for feeding the child. Molly has mentioned her promising beginning, and now, in her tenth week, weighs about fifteen pounds.

When Molly grows up she can reflect—if she cannot remember—that she contributed considerably to the cause of baby efficiency by furnishing Dr. Talbot with her share of unusually reliable "calorimeter stuff," as a stock manager would express it.

The recording devices which are connected with the calorimeter are to take note of everything, so far as possible, that occurs during and out side of a baby, after the baby has been fed a prescribed amount of food. When the baby is "bottle fed," with the milk modified or not as the subject requires, then the exact weight of the food may be taken. In cases of a breast baby the amount of food is estimated as nearly as possible from the length of the nursing period.

The baby is placed in the calorimeter's respiration chamber, which is equipped with air scientifically purified. Two fine conducting channels become dust and the watchful physicians and nurses are not bothered by it.

By means of the calorimeter measure can be taken of every bit of heat generated by the child and thrown off, of muscular activity, such as taking a step, playing with toys, laughs, moves arms or legs, turns over, hiccoughs or even breaths.

While in the calorimeter the child breathes in fresh pure air containing the proper amount of oxygen and breathes out the same air changed by processes in the lungs to carbon dioxid with moisture.

What is exhaled is then pumped off into tubes and into receptacles where gases are separated, measured and recorded for future comparison. In another place the heat generated by the child is registered and another instrument tells how many times the child's heart beats.

Perhaps the most delicate record of all is that made by the kymograph and tambour drum which vividly registers all motion and activity even to breathing. A diaphragm of rubber and a tube of the same material transmits each movement as the air is compressed, to a delicately arranged recording straw or pencil which moves up and down on a revolving drum covered with carbon. If the baby moves ever so little, pressure takes place, and up goes the pencil.

In his treatises upon this absorbing subject of efficiency engineering, as applied to babies, Dr. Talbot says: "Baby feeding and day development is a study in life for the physician as much as the framing of a building or the running of an engine is to the engineer.

"It is the business of the engineer to get the maximum amount of heat from the minimum amount of fuel" he says. "It is the physician's function, who is studying child hygiene, to see to it that the child not only gets the right kind of food, but that it is able to make the best possible use of food material toward furnishing heat for the body and at the same time developing body cells and tissue in other words, growing as a child should.

"The building up of the human body, the changing of food into heat, cells, activity, mentality and nervous energy, is one of the deepest studies, containing some of the most puzzling problems that have ever confronted the human race."

Dr. Talbot explains that the babies most needed for the observations are those who are happy and healthy, and that they will lie comparatively quiet for at least 15-minute periods.

Milk, of course, is the only diet, and breast milk is preferred to bottle milk, modified or not.

"One reason," adds Dr. Talbot, "why it is easier and more satisfactory to work with infants in these observations is because it is a simple matter to know what their food is composed of. For instance, in milk are carbo-hydrates, fat, protein and salts. But in the food taken by adults are many more elements in complicated form, as found in meats and various vegetables."

Countryless Man Denied Corpus Writ

Frederick Tayler, the alleged spy, known as the "man without a country," who was deported from England as an American citizen, has been denied a writ of habeas corpus by Judge Morton in the United States District Court. The Court declined to grant the writ, but counsel argued another hearing at which he will be permitted to present all the evidence he desires in his favor.

SLIM LOBBY THIS YEAR ON THE HILL

An irate lobby looks down upon the legislature and murmurs, "The day of the paid politician is here."

The registration of the lobby is smaller than at any time in the recent history of the Massachusetts legislature.

But five "special counsel" are registered and four of them on matters of insignificant legislation. Not so long ago the big, black book was kind-worn at this time.

The matters that interest the four would never shake the State with excitement. More land for a burying-ground in Foxboro is one subject. Another concerns an annuity for a lady in Newton. The third concerns the affairs of "The Voter and His Employer," a newspaper, and the other has to do with matters attracting the attention of the Boston Bar Association.

Of the "big fellows" but one has registered. Attorney Charles S. Pierce of Milton, who will represent the Boston & Maine Railroad, "in all matters affecting the interest of the railroad."

A declaration of policy has been made by the Boston & Maine in which the intention of the road to be represented by its "legal department" only, is stated.

Attorney Edgar J. Rich, chief counsel for the road, will head the legal representation at the State House, and Mr. Pierce, once a representative from Milton, will accompany him.

With railroad stock hitting the low places, the grambling stockholders looking on in amazement at the daily revelation of "finance" and the public wondering what will happen next, the road has decided to put itself "in the hands of the people." The decision of the company is to advance upon the State House with a bushel or two of requests and to let the Legislature decide for itself.

Arthur Barnes is expected to go up on the Hill for the New York, New Haven & Hartford. The Boston & Albany has made no definite announcement of what "form" its representation will take.

SHUTTERS UPON 'BELL IN HAND'

Famous Inn Closed Temporarily While Waiting Same Location in New Block.

The "Bell in Hand," famous tavern and the only one in Boston for many years that had its name in symbol over the door, closed last night temporarily, for the "Pi Alley" building in which it has been located since 1821 is to be torn down. When the new Niles building is finished the ancient inn will reopen upon exactly the same spot. All the furniture and pictures will be reinstated and the bar and present surroundings will be reproduced as nearly as possible.

The "Bell in Hand" has always been very English. It was established by Jeremiah Wheeler, town crier, in Congress square as long ago as 1795. It is, in fact, 120 years old, sixty-five years ago it was moved to Williams Court, which is the quite-native name for the narrow thoroughfare from Court square to Washington street. Williams Court was too formal for the printers who traveled the lane. They called it "Pi Alley." When typed it is "Pi" it is much mixed. The "Bell in Hand" served a "pi" brew in musty ale, which had journeyed from coast to coast.

Billy Park, who conducted for many years a famous hotel not far away, borrowed musty to fret in barrows with "broiled live." He is credited with originating that style of cooking lobsters. It was not so far other years that one of the valuables known to have been taken from Albertson had been recovered. When he disappeared Albertson had $2,000 worth of jewels and $400 in cash.

Jimson Gibson, founder, did not believe Medford or Jamaica rum, gin or other alcoholic institutions much in favor in his day were good for man. But he thought ale was wholesome and sold nothing else. So the "Bell in Hand," with sandy floors, four quaint rooms, rare old paintings and pewter mugs, always remained a place of tradition. Rare reproduction of London pictures by William Hogarth decorated the walls. The painting of the head of John the Baptist is more than three centuries old.

Many famous men have drank ale out of pewter in this place. It was a favorite resort of Daniel Webster. Eminent lawyers and jurists have gathered under its low ceilings. It was frequented by merchants, statesmen and society men.

Game Warden Is After Bryan for Virginia 'Hunt'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—"Secretary Bryan will be prosecuted the same as if he were an ordinary wood chopper."

This statement was made today by H. C. Cockrell, game warden of Fairfax County, Virginia, and clerk of the court at Fairfax Court House, in announcing that he would swear out a warrant against the Secretary of State for violating the Virginia game laws if he can find witnesses to back up the charge.

It is alleged that the secretary, in company with John S. Barbour of Fairfax, went hunting in the Virginia hills for rabbits on Christmas Day. It is reported that they did not shoot any game, but a Virginia law prohibits hunting while snow lies on the ground.

Hunt Albertson's Missing Jewels

Following the indictment of Bagio Falzone and Ignazio Morello on the charge of first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Maurice A. Albertson, the Lawrence jeweler, at Wakefield, the police have made a vigorous search for jewels taken from Albertson at the time of the crime.

The police admitted that the report that they had recovered $500 worth of jewels was untrue, and added that none of the valuables known to have been taken from Albertson had been recovered. When he disappeared Albertson had $2,000 worth of jewels and $400 in cash.

In the belief that the jewels had been hidden in Wakefield, possibly not far from the scene of the murder on Columbia road, patrolmen set to work digging in cellars and paid special attention to the shanty in which Albertson's body was found. Here the ashes were sifted, walls were tapped. Other nearby buildings were as thoroughly gone through.

The wife and three children of Luigi Grassidonio, who was indicted on the charge of being an accessory before the crime, were reported in destitute circumstances in Wakefield. Medical aid for children are heartbroken, and it was feared the mother might suffer a nervous collapse. Neighbors contributed food for the family.

Truck Wrecks a Store; 3 Are Hurt

Three men narrowly escaped death when a loaded ten-ton Metropolitan Coal Company's truck backed down a steep incline just below the Mission Church, Roxbury, and crashed in the shoe store of Frank Lorenzo at No. 1440 Tremont street.

Those in the shop at the time of the accident were Ernest Daily, forty-four, of No. 21 Pearl street, Brookline; Chas. Tarmenti, thirty-one, and Frank Lorenzo, owner of the store.

All three men were taken into the office of Dr. E. F. Murphy, No. 1440 Tremont street, where it was found that Daily, the most seriously injured, was suffering from a slight concussion of the brain, while Lorenzo and Tarmenti had received scalp wounds and body bruises.

DESERTED HIS BRIDE AT CHURCH

Court Orders Taunton Man to Support Wife He Refuses to Live With.

TAUNTON, Jan. 9.—A pathetic story of how one was deserted at the church by the man she had just married, was told in Probate Court by Clara Duart, a pretty young woman, who petitioned for separate support from Antone Duart.

According to the story she told Judge Aiker, they were married in 1910, and as they left the church, the bridegroom said he had business he must attend to immediately, but would return to her at her parents' home by nightfall. He never came back and when he was finally located agreed to pay her four dollars a week for support.

Mrs. Duart said he did this for a while, but now one fear subsequently down to three dollars and some weeks did not give her a cent. She said she met Duart on the street one day and asked him for money, but he struck her in the face.

Duart was in court and through counsel informed the court that he was willing to support his wife, but would not live with her. He was ordered to pay five dollars a week. The young wife said she knew of no reason why he should not live with her.

Elliott Warns of Laws That Hurt and Not Aid Business

"We Need Legislation to Help Restore Railroads' Credit"

Former President Taft Also Speaks at the Banquet of Technology Alumni.

Five hundred Technology graduates at the annual banquet at the Somerset last night jubilated over a program of surprises and heard distinguished speakers, who included former President Taft and Chairman Howard Elliott of the New Haven.

Chairman Elliott discussed the New Haven's problems at length. The other speakers included Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing, President Richard C. Maclaurin of Technology, and Henry J. Horn, President-elect of the Tech alumni.

Among the guests was President Lowell of Harvard. Mr. Taft and Mr. Lowell sat side by side, and during the early courses of the banquet Mr. Taft read to President Lowell an editorial from a New York paper, discussing President Wilson, and the two chuckled heartily over what they read.

An early surprise was the presentation to President MacLaurin of a silver loving cup for Richard C. MacLaurin, Jr. President MacLaurin, after there had been cheers for him, for "Junior" and for Mrs. MacLaurin, assured the alumni that "When I left home, the youngster was well. He was practising the Tech yell."

DECLINES TO COMMENT.

Mr. Taft was asked to comment on President Wilson's Indianapolis speech, but only laughed and said: "Oh, no, no, no, no! I'll have to decline to make any comment. The speech of Chairman Elliott follows in part:

"Since the Civil War, a large amount of work has been done in this country in developing the natural resources and in creating all kinds of agencies for the promotion of the welfare of the public—commercial, financial, manufacturing, educational, charitable, and, last, but not least, transportation.

In doing this work mistakes have been made, methods have been tried and discarded, principles of business and management that were fixed for one set of conditions have been found to be wrong for another set; and there has been some loss and waste in the great constructive work of the last fifty years. But, on the whole, a marvelous piece of work has been done and, as a result, our people have the best living conditions in the world.

Men who have graduated from institutions like Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute have had a share in bringing about these results, but due credit must likewise be given to the many men who, without the advantages of early education, have by sheer native ability, hard common sense, force and industry done great work for the United States.

Now we are entering a different period in our history, requiring less as much work as before, but, perhaps a different kind of work and requiring greater skill than ever before. The exploitation and use of the natural resources in a rough and crude way is over. The period of great railroad systems is past.

We must be more and more careful in conserving our natural resources, in improving our agricultural practices, in adding to our manufacturing methods in our great railroad systems and public service corporations, in adopting constantly improving standards in finance and commerce, and, more than all, in managing the great business of government so that it will be efficient, economical, fair, and helpful to all forms of human industry.

SIMPLE ARITHMETIC.

In doing all of the work of the last fifty years sometimes not enough attention has been paid to simple arithmetic and the ordinary laws of economics and economics. Failure to take into account some of the great economic laws has caused trouble, just as the failure to take into account natural forces causes a bridge to fall, or an explosion to occur.

There is a great field for the man who is fortunate enough to receive a technical training in the Institute, broadened, at the same time, by the influence of the liberal spirit of Harvard. In dealing with the problems of the next twenty years the trained mind and the expert in every line will be needed to produce efficiency and economy, but, at the same time, the economical expert must not lose sight of the broader questions of business as a whole and of the relations of the government to all business.

Considerable advance has been made in efficiency, in manufacturing, in finance, in education, more in transportation, and there is very much more still to be accomplished. Consider the business I am in. Our railroads are the most efficient in the world and furnish cheaper and better service and at lower prices than can be obtained in any other country.

They are not as good as they should be and can be, but they are owned and managed by men living who are no better or no worse as a class than other people, and they are trying to serve. They have made, and will continue to make, mistakes, just as people make in all kinds of business, as well as in government.

One reason why they are not as good as they ought to be is that legislators, State and national, in trying to correct mistakes which owners and managers have made, have allowed the slogan-monger and the blind them to the dollars of wonderful work already done and being done every day. They have, in their effort to correct abuses and mistakes which were grudgingly correcting themselves, created conditions which today make it almost impossible for the owners and managers of railroads to go ahead and do the very things that the public ought most to want to and that the owners and managers want to do.

WHAT IT MEANS.

Consider for a moment what the railroad industry means to this country.—1,848,881 employed in steam it pays $1,350,025,286 in wages; forty-four cents of every dollar spent by the railroads is paid to the amount of 915 persons dependent upon it for a living. If families of five persons be counted; 1,000,000 workers in plants furnishing railroad material and supplies—these, counting their families number 5,000,000 people.

About 25 cents of each dollar received are paid out for materials and supplies, the bulk of which goes into the pay envelopes of those who produce them.

Twenty-five million persons, over one-fifth of the population, are directly or indirectly interested in the financial results of the railroad industry.

I believe the railroad managements of the country realize that they must strive for the highest honesty, the greatest economy, efficiency in managing the properties and recognize the fact that the relations of public regulation in the future will depend somewhat upon the attitude of the railroad owners and managers in dealing with the public.

The railroads, however, should remember that in exercising their great power through their governors to punish the railroads for errors and failures, they may go too far and hurt those who were not responsible in any way for these errors and cripple the very institution that ought to be well equipped to serve all the people.

One million five hundred thousand holders of stocks and bonds, owners of the railroad industry, represent at least 6,000,000 persons in the United States whom it thus helps to support. Railway bonds constitute 19 per cent. of all bonds held by Savings banks.

MONEY PAID OUT.

Two billion one hundred and sixty-four million eight hundred and fifty-one thousand two hundred and ten dollars paid out by this industry in 1913 for expenses of all kinds, equivalent to $23.53 for every man, woman and child in the United States. Railroad income flows back to the people.

One hundred and twenty-nine million one hundred and eighty-three and eight hundred and eighty dollars was paid in taxes in 1913 for the support of national, State and local government, equivalent to $1.43 for every inhabitant of the United States. The railroads are the country's largest taxpayers.

The result of railroad operations for the fiscal year ending January 30, 1914, compared with the previous fiscal year, showed:

Gross earnings, dec..	$44,000,000
Expenses and taxes, inc.	76,000,000
Net oper. income, dec.	125,000,000
Taxes alone, inc..	12,616,402

The average dividend paid in 1913 was 4.23 per cent., and of total capital stock one-third paid no dividend and 10 per cent. of total funded debt paid no interest.

The American railroads perform a greater service per mile of line at a cheaper rate and pay higher wages than any other railroads in the world.

The comptroller of the currency says, in his annual report, that there are 11,600,000 depositors in savings banks, with $5,000,000,000 to their credit. Much of this large sum is invested by the banks in railroad securities, so that these 11,600,000 people have a very vital interest in having the railroad industry sound and profitable.

The conservation of this industry is vital to this country, and owners and managers should be helped rather than hindered in their efforts to make it more useful and efficient.

Confidence and credit are vital to any business and particularly to the railroad. Earnings under honest and efficient management should be enough to bring the necessary confidence and credit and in return improvements to be made each year out of earnings, and thus keep down new borrowings. They ought to be sufficient also to good times so as to permit the creation of a surplus for use in poor times.

Many improvements are needed by the public which produce no new revenue but really increase expenses, such as better stations and cars, elimination of grade crossings, and electrification, and the railroad owners and managers would be glad to provide all of these things if they had the money.

It would seem as if a sound policy for the State and the nation would be to strengthen the credit of the railroads and not to strain it, so that securities now in the hands of the public will be considered safe and new securities may be sold to make those improvements which will shortly become necessary to carry on the business of the country.

There are a number of signs that the pendulum of regulation, having swung so far in the direction of drastic and almost strangling legislation has stopped, and it is most earnestly to be hoped that the damage already suffered by the railroads and transportation interests of the country can be repaired before the next uplift in business.

NUMBER OF SIGNS.

As an academic proposition it seems to be conceded that the railroad industry needs more help than it can obtain from itself. The need is great and the time is short within which to prepare for the growth of the country, for can anyone believe that the United States, with 180,000,000 people, with $70,000,000,000 of new agricultural wealth produced each year, and nearly $18,000,000,000 in banks and saving institutions, is going to stand still? Of course, it is not, and it is going ahead and our people will want coal and ore and iron and steel and lumber and merchandise and manufactured articles moved about the country in quantity greater in the next ten years than ever before.

To do it transportation must be available, and the machinery for producing it cannot be created over night, but must be prepared ahead of time. What is true of the United States is true of this beautiful and populous New England. It will grow and develop, and the great railroads should be helped in their earnest efforts to get their houses in order and keep solvent until brighter times come.

The New England roads need a number of things, some of which have already been granted in part.

NEEDS ARE MANY.

They need higher rates, both freight and passenger, to meet nonremunerative increases of wages, taxes, terminal and other expenses. The public Service Commissions of the various States and the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the matter of the parcels post, and it is to be hoped the Congressional delegation from New England will help secure these rates.

They need a realization by the public that the railroad can only obtain money by earning, saving or borrowing, and the co-operation of the public in helping them to postpone the spending of money for improvements until such time as the money is available.

They also need the aid of the public in introducing economies which, at times, mean less frequent and less luxurious service, but which are absolutely necessary if the railroads are to be preserved intact and do their work for New England as a whole.

I am glad to say that the public is realizing that, after all, the roads that higher rates must be paid, and are beginning to help with the efforts of the roads to save money and postpone improvements.

They need legislation, in the various New England States that will not confuse and that will permit the inauguration and development of some broad financial plan so that they can give up the present expensive method of borrowing money at high rates of interest for short periods of time. Such legislation will help to restore the credit of the railroads and thus help not only the roads and their security holders but business generally.

INFLUENCE NEEDED.

They need the influence of thoughtful, earnest men upon all in public life to show them that the time has come when the public servant will serve his country and his constituents who, while stamping out the dishonesty and improper practices in both the government and business, will realize that government is not for the purpose of crippling and hindering business.

The question of the relation of the government to the people is perpetual, but if the wonderful educational system of the United States does its work right we ought to do better with the problems in the next twenty-five years than we have done in the last.

Regulation of the great public service corporations, if it stops progress, is a failure. The power to regulate carries with it the duty to protect. Men like the presidents of the Institute and of Harvard ought to use their influence with their respective alumni and help them, and should not stand aloof, but, as stated by the President in his letter of September 10 to the railroads, "All stand as one to see justice done and all fair assistance rendered and rendered ungrudgingly."

Won't Slip

They cling with the sureness and tenacity of the monkey.

The wearer of Bailey's Rubber Heels no more fears slipping than does the monkey in jumping from limb to limb.

Both are sure of the firm hold that positively will not slip on any surface.

The "U" shaped curve and flatend rubber studs can't slip—they hold to the surface—the slippery pavement—the ice—it's all the same with them—they stick.

At Extraordinary Reductions Below Our Regular Wholesale Prices

Although our business for the year 1914 has shown a steady and satisfactory growth over the previous year—notwithstanding the foreign troubles and consequent depression of business, so generally felt in this country—except the fact is that we have for much goods in our hands at the beginning of the new year, so rather than carry them over to next season we have decided to make a QUICK CLEARANCE of them by marking them at startling and drastic reductions—in many cases below actual cost. We think it good business policy to do this twice each year—it helps us to keep our Old Friends and to win many new ones.

Please remember that this is not a sale of Job Lots, so largely advertised by other stores, and at best of doubtful merit, but this Season's Purchases of Standard qualities, that came with them at all times our guarantee of absolute satisfaction to every customer who trades with us.

RUSSIANS ENTER TRANSYLVANIA; NEW GERMAN DRIVE ON WARSAW

alans now control all of Bukowina, and that their advance guard has already invaded Transylvania. This report says the Austrians hurriedly evacuated the remainder of their positions in Bukowina, and that they are now concentrating to defend Hungary.

With the Russian army occupying the most important positions of the Carpathians from the side of Bohemia, the Austrian army can advance no farther toward Warsaw, for the only roads across the marshes are mined and strongly held by the Russians. On the other hand, the Austrians are obliged to defend Cracow and, because of the Russian manoeuvres, can only meet the Russians along the line from Wielicska to Bochnia under the most unfavorable conditions.

EIG ROUMANIAN ARMY.

The Morning Post's Bucharest correspondent says:

"Roumania is mobilizing 700,000 men, of which number half a million form the field army. Roumania will strike even should Italy decide not to enter the war."

Italy, it is said, has replied in terms that amount to a menace to Austria's note protesting against Italy's occupation of Avlona, the Albanian seaport. It is understood that the Rome government set forth that it would continue to protect its interests "as it saw fit."

In the meantime, Europe awaits Turkey's answer to Italy's ultimatum on the Hodeida incident. Rome dispatches say that the understanding is that Turkey has until midnight Sunday to meet the Italian demands.

Turkey, according to the Italian ultimatum, must apologize for the arrest of the British Consul in the Italian consulate at Hodeida and salute the Italian flag.

Dispatches from various sources say that Turkey is willing to make a formal apology for the incident, but will not give in on the question of a salute.

There is little doubt here that Italy, if Turkey will not accede fully to her stipulations, will at once proceed to take forcible action, although the direction of such action is not indicated.

BULGARIA AROUSED.

Bulgaria, stirred by the activity of Roumania and Italy in endeavoring to reserve to the rulers, according to a dispatch from Switzerland. The general opinion is that if Bulgaria enters the war it will be on the side of Germany, Austria and Turkey, in order to get back the fruits of war lost to the last Balkan conflict.

WARSAW IN DANGER.

The great German drive against Warsaw continues, according to to-day's dispatches from Poland, with evidences that Field Marshal von Hindenburg is confident of taking the Polish capital on this, his fourth great attempt. According to Vienna dispatches Germany has assured the Austrian government that the German armies are all set to Warsaw within a few days.

Taking advantage of the continued and increasing cold weather which has frozen the morass and swamps to the numerous rivers in every Poland, the Germans are now moving on Warsaw from the north.

Having contented themselves with fortifying and taking the defensive west of Warsaw, along the banks of the Bzura and southward between Sklerniewice and Grodzisk and farther southward along the left bank of the Vistula, the Germans are now reported massing in the north preparatory to an advance. This assault is considered a sequel of the German demonstration of four weeks ago, when, advancing from Mlawa they were repulsed by Russian troops across the border.

ADVANCE EN MASSE.

The previous advance, obviously, was made with the aim of assuming themselves with the nature of the ground and the disposition of the Russian forces, as well as assisting General Mackensen's attack west of Warsaw by attracting Russian troops to the northward. This time the German offensive is said to be en masse, including the army corps now fighting through the snow from Belgium. It is reported that on the Russian Christmas day heavy fighting occurred between Mlawa and Prasnysz.

The German intention seems to be to try and force a route through Prasnysz, Rozan, Pultusk and Sochaczew, thus making a considerably wider movement and swinging further to the eastward than in their previous attempt. In taking this direction it will be necessary for the Germans to cross the rivers Narew and Bug, the latter of which is not sufficiently frozen to provide safe transport for the heavy artillery.

IN WESTERN THEATRE.

In the western theatre of war French and German gains and losses about offset each other, judging by the language of the official reports.

Paris official reports today announce heavy fighting in Alsace, Bernhaupt-le-Haup, the Alsatian town whose capture by French troops was announced in Paris yesterday, has been recaptured by the Germans, who suffered heavy losses. This is admitted by the French War Office. To offset this, however, the French claim to have captured the town of Perthes, France, which had been held by the Germans for several weeks.

The German official statement, on the other hand, says that French attacks near Solissons and near Perthes have been repulsed with heavy loss to the attacking forces.

More important news comes unofficially by way of Basle, Switzerland, and Berlin, to the effect that the Germans have occupied Steinbach in Alsace, the French retreating to Thann.

Steinbach is eight miles west of Munchausen. It was occupied by the French a week ago after a terrific bombardment, and severe hand-to-hand fighting in the streets. Thann is the French base, three miles west of Steinbach.

AVIATORS BUSY.

In France and Flanders there is unusual activity by German aviators, according to an official statement from Berlin. It says that German aircraft yesterday bombarded Hazebrouck and Strazeele. They were pursued by British airmen and the result of the aerial engagement is unknown.

Other airmen bombarded Armentieres, causing an explosion at the railway depot and killing a number of civilians. Near Vardun German aviators bombarded the French troops in the Bois de Forest with success.

Reiteration of the story of six persons killed in England by Zeppelin airships is made by the Amsterdam correspondent of the Daily Express, who says that preparations are near to completed for carrying out the project.

Ten first-class Zeppelins will constitute the aerial fleet which will be under the personal command of Count Zeppelin. Hundreds of professional and amateur airmen have volunteered to take part in the attack.

A large number of aeroplanes for reconnoitering purposes, torpedoes and submarines will accompany the big airships. The latter will be to cripple the main British fleet and attack London.

It is hoped that the expedition will be ready to start in the last few days of January.

TRANSPORT SUNK WITH 900.

Petrograd dispatches, received today, tell sinking on January 2 of a Turkish transport in the Black Sea by Russian warships. The vessel carried 900 Turkish officers and of were lost. 500 was rescued by the cruiser Medjidieh, which escaped, though badly damaged.

Scattered remnants of the Turkish forces are overwhelmingly retreated at Ardahan and Sari-Kamysh have ral-

Official War Statements

FRENCH.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—In the south of Ypres the enemy damaged the trenches of the enemy and slightly injured three throwers.

In the region of Arras and in that of Soissons there have been artillery duels near batteries having no material advantage.

In the region of Soupir we captured by assault trenches of Hill No. 132 in a brilliant engagement, marked three attacks during the day. The enemy made violent counter-attacks. His was repulsed with heavy losses. Our gain represents three lines of German trenches on a front of 600 yards.

To-night, being unable to retake the positions which he held previously, the enemy burned the Palace of Justice at Berle.

To the south of Lagy and of Craonne our artillery demolished a bomb containing rapid fire guns, silenced the enemy's artillery and rendered some of his batteries useless.

In the region of Perthes the enemy made a pronounced attack to-night. We immediately responded with a counter attack, which resulted in our troops holding our position on Hill No. 180, west of Perthes, but also to capture five yards of the enemy's trenches between Hill No. 196 and the village of Perthes.

In addition to a single attack directed by us upon Perthes at the south time that we were making our counter attack upon Hill No. 196 we delivered another upon Beau Marais. We have taken up our position there and have advanced beyond the borders. Our total gain from this note was more than 1,000 yards in depth when the whole front.

Between Souain and the Argonne our artillery directed appropriate fires upon the enemy as attacked the communications in the Argonne we have suffered on our right. Above all, from the enemy to which we have responded with a counter attack.

In the Argonne we have made progress from which they started.

In the Woevre region to the northeast of Flirey in the forest of Ailly and in the forest of Le Prêtre we have made slight progress.

In the region of Combres (northwest of Selim), we have modified our positions. Further to the south, the enemy has been scattered, recaptured from our first line of the east of very large.

11 P. M.

Yesterday's bombardment of Soissons has since maintained. Another offensive this attack by the Germans was received this morning.

The aggressive movement between Perthes Les Hurlus and Hill No. 200 have been successful. Two attacked. Our troops were blocked, driven back, suffering heavy losses.

There is nothing to report from the rest of the front.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 9.—On the left bank of the Vistula River, along the front from Sokolka as far as Mogilnica, the fighting is becoming more stubborn. In spite of their great losses, the Germans are persistently attacking our trenches. The Russians are making counter-attacks and are repulsing the enemy with their bayonet charges. In the region of Mogilnica the Russians captured several officers and more than 100 men on January 7.

In Bukowina the Russians occupied Kimolung on January 6 and have now reached the mountains separating Bukowina from Hungary. The fighting is raging in the pasture of Kimpolung lasted eight days, and during that time our troops covered a distance of eighty miles.

In these operations we took 1,000 Austrian prisoners and a considerable quantity of war munitions.

EVENING.

Yesterday there was no change in the disposition of our troops on any part of the front.

In the Mogra district severe fighting continues and is developing.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Jan. 9.—On the western front fighting of more or less heavy rages the counteracts. It thundered all day yesterday. The fire, at some places has overflowed its banks.

Several attacks made by the enemy northeast of Soissons were broken off with severe losses to the French. A French attack near Perthes, in the forest of Chaldon was also repulsed. The losses of the enemy were severe.

In the Eastern Argonne an unsuccessful mine explosion took place between positions. We took 1,500 prisoners, nine mortars and a bronze mortar. The Alsatian battalion of Hussars landwehr particularly distinguished themselves in this action.

One of our advanced trenches, which at the time we were not occupied, at Four was occupied by the French, and was blown up. All the French approaches were filled.

Southwest of Le Mesnil there is nothing to report.

The French have been driven out of Ober-Burnhaupt. (Burnhaupt-le-Haut) and Nieder-Burnhaupt. Their retreat from this place old positions. We took 100 prisoners in the fighting at Ober-Burnhaupt.

On the eastern frontier the bad weather continues, but nevertheless, on January 7 we took 2,500 prisoners and seven machine guns.

AUSTRIAN.

VIENNA, Jan. 9.—The situation remains unchanged. There have been no prolonged engagements.

The Austrians have repulsed a strong Russian attack in the Carpathians to the north of Uszok, capturing 400 prisoners and three machine guns.

GREAT SLAUGHTER IN 2 DAYS' FIGHT

French Hurl Germans Back and Repel All Their Counter Attacks.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Attacks and counter attacks delivered with bewildering rapidity and fury on two short stretches of battle front along the Aisne today and yesterday have turned this region into a veritable inferno. The fighting has exceeded in intensity the original battle of the Aisne.

On the twenty-mile section north of Soissons, eastward almost to Craonne, the country is a shambles. No less so is the front to the north of Perthes and Beausejour. The fields every appearance of having been wrecked by an earthquake, swept by a tornado and devastated by fire. Great furrows scar the sides of hills, making gaps where mines have blown and trenches were.

And over it all are scattered the bodies of the dead, shreds of uniforms, mangled remains of horses, with here and there a hand protruding with ghastly effect, punctuating with awful suggestiveness the steady rattle of musketry and the whirring staccato reports of the quick fires.

FRENCH TAKE TRENCHES.

On both these fields the French have gained, but only after desperate struggles by an extremely violent enemy. Yesterday's bloody battle gave the allies time the counter attacks of the German troops, driven in disorder on the line of repulse of the French advance.

After the capture of two lines of the German trenches to the north of Soissons, more than 1,000 men, forced from the plateau of Vregy, between Nanteuil and Auve, the French allied line carried along the line eastward and the republic's forces now hold more than two miles of the German trenches in a serious menace.

Three times they buried massed columns against the newly captured positions, and three times they broke on each and crumbled in the face of the French artillery and rifle fire, which mowed down rank upon rank.

Night brought a cessation of the infantry assault, but there was no let-up in the artillery duels. These have been considerable which was sharply concentrated on the front of the Franco-Belgian line.

Yesterday the French themselves again returned to the attack in a desperate effort to retake their lost positions. The struggle was particularly disastrous for that they were forced back upon their last line of defense. Here the French reserves were compelled to dig new lines of supporting trenches on a front from Chevrigny through Pasly to Mercy-le-Haut.

SHELL HIDDEN BATTERY.

The French gunners found a military target upon which to retaliate for this act. The air scouts uncovered a concealed battery back of Soupir, of long range Armstrong, where a number of guns, of the type of rapid-fire guns and a detached portion of a battery. They passed the range to the French gunners, with the result that a number of direct hits were scored, the explosions being highly explosive shells to shell metal, and the result was accomplished. The artillery duels began shortly after midnight, and continued until 5 o'clock this morning, when the troops were withdrawn from the trenches being wrecked and the second gave silenced.

Violent counter attacks by the Germans also were directed today against the troops of the French captured yesterday, between Perthes and Hill No. 200 to the westward. Perthes itself is in the hands of the French, as a result of a furious single attack made while the French also were making a counter attack on Hill No. 200.

The Germans were driven back at this point more than 500 yards and all of their trenches on the field of this depth have been captured and are now in French hands.

The French have succeeded to the north of Perthes. Heavy losses were inflicted on the invaders both yesterday and today.

The French official statement this morning admitted that the Germans have retaken the town of Upper Burnhaupt, in the south of Alsace, in which, though the operation cost the Germans heavily.

Slight gains are recorded at other points of the line where prolonged fighting has been in progress, but no material change in the situation elsewhere has been recorded.

Generally speaking, the French artillery has maintained its advantage over the German guns and nowhere has the latter been able to break through the allies' lines.

'Princess Pat' Men Leave for Front

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Part of the Canadian contingent, the numbers of which have been ration, sailed today for their country of training in Southern England. This does not indicate a change in plans for the fighting ability in the trenches of northern France.

Princess Patricia's regiment, largely composed of men who have seen service, arrived yesterday for Southampton, where they embarked for a French port. Their place is to be followed by the Scottish regiments of the contingent, and later by other units, which have been attached to British regiments.

Says Allies Will Win War in a Year

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9.—"The war will be over in a year. The allies will win. They will win because they must win." These optimistic words were uttered today by Philip Snowden, member of Parliament, who arrived here today with his wife, from Vancouver, B. C., on the liner Ventura en route to England.

The noted Englishman is the second member of the Blanchard Lansbury family and his wife is one of the noted suffragists of Great Britain. She also had an sympathy with the militant suffragists.

Hot Tea Breaks A Cold---Try This

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any drug store. Take a teaspoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teaspoonful at any time during the day. Tea is so prepared is cold and cures grip as it opens the gorged liver and intestines. Also cures the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

Tea is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Advertisement.

GERMANS NOTIFY VIENNA THAT VON HINDENBURG'S ARMY WILL SOON ENTER WARSAW

VIENNA, Jan. 9.—Reports are current here that the fall of Warsaw is imminent. The rumors are to the effect that the Austrian government has been notified by Germany that its troops will enter the capital of Poland within a few days.

* * * * * * *

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The German newspaper Staats-Zeitung has received information that General von Hindenburg's troops are nearing Warsaw and that they will reach and enter that city within a very short time.

ROSEBERY HINTS AT CONSCRIPTION

EDINBURGH, Jan. 9.—Speaking here tonight, Lord Rosebery made the plain statement that some system of compulsory enlistment would be resorted to if sufficient recruits for the English army were not obtained in the voluntary way.

"Britain is fighting with her back to the wall," he admitted. "She could not live if she stood without being permanently subjugated—nor will she give way until the last ship and man has been spent. Germany also knows that, beaten in this war, she is beaten down forever.

"If sufficient recruits are not obtained for the British army under the voluntary system, of enlistment there will soon be enforced some compulsory system."

TAKES ISSUE WITH ELIOT ON THE WAR

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Dr. Henry M. MacCracken, formerly chancellor of the New York University, speaking today at the Republican Club, took sharp issue with Charles W. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard, for his attitude toward the European war.

"In a single sentence," exclaimed Dr. MacCracken, "I hold deep the truth of these assertions and urge all true Americans to favor and advocate that this war will be a drawn battle.

"I have myself been a student in Germany within the period which Dr. Eliot indicates in his statement. I believe there forms of education were partly occupied in preparing me to be a better Christian. My impression is that the forces of education in Germany are as wise in making all-around good citizens as are our public schools in the United States.

"I hold that our government should by every lawful means outside of war favor the continuance of this war difficult, if not impossible."

DERNBURG SAYS WAR IS FOR THE FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

Former German Official Declares Re-establishment of Free Waters Would Mean World Peace.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former imperial German colonial secretary and, next to Count Von Bernstorff, the recognized spokesman of the Kaiser Wilhelm in America, addressed the Republican Club this afternoon and said:

"I think everybody agrees that the present European war is a world calamity, threatening prosperity and civilization alike and that it must be the duty of all meaning people to see to it that its causes are permanently removed.

"Already a great deal of damage has been done to the prosperity of the world. Let me speak of the commercial side. The trade of all countries has been disturbed to an alarming extent, most of the German overseas trade has been stopped.

"Natural shipping is being seriously interfered with. Merchant vessels are locked and overcome freight rates are being charged by the only nation (England) that has any bottoms to offer.

ON OWN RESOURCES.

"Contrary interfering with the shipping of this country has terrified American exporters. This may be a necessary consequence of a state of war, but the danger and the fear must be lest this distraction of trade should become permanent.

"Germany, for instance, is thrown now upon her own resources as regards foodstuffs, metals and oils. The importation of cotton is so far harassed by England that the bales opened in English harbors arrive in Europe in condition hardly fit for use.

"In Germany and Austria 20,000,000 tons more of wheat than produce have been practically cut off from the use of such staple products, and they must look for substitutes.

"The war waged by England against Germany is a war of starvation. It is based upon the contention (contrary to proof and to the rule of three) that foodstuffs going to Germany would primarily serve 1,000,000 in the field and not 120,000,000 people of home. That has, of course, produced counter measures.

"Every available spot in Germany has been planted with fall with wheat and other foodstuff imported before, so there can be no doubt that the shortage of 6 per cent. of foodstuffs that has so far been imported will be fully made up by replacing wheat bread, rye and oats mixed make a very nourishing bread. American vessels are largely replaced by neutral, a volatile matter gained in the present crisis.

COPPER SUBSTITUTE.

"Instead of copper a great many others of other metals containing a small percentage of copper is being tried. Instead of American cotton large quantities of Indian cotton came in by way of Italy. The same holds good as to coffee, and tea. Rubber and other products to which the United States is tributary.

"If the people have come for some considerable time to understand the use of certain products, it is difficult to bring them back again to their former habits. In the long run the question of the present calamity is, to be freed from the nightmare and to make themselves independent permanently in order not to be placed again in the same position that is now so highly destroyed. Most necessary permanent means of which is the [illegible] of the [illegible] of the present situation in Europe and the restoration of peace and happiness of the world.

"Only if we combine the whole fight and all the rights to do so in the face of the absolute domination of the seven seas, not on land, but on the free sea, the traditional mare liberum.

"A victory on one will mean a cessation of war, decay and a stopping of world wars.

SEA FREE TO ALL.

"The sea is free to all. It belongs to no nation in particular. The rights of the continuous nations cease with the territorial line three miles from low tide. Any domination exercised beyond that line is a piracy and an infringement on the rights of the whole world.

"The evidence is now conclusive that heretofore and for a considerable time to come, the freedom of shipping has been done under British permission and tolerance and that threat has caused an apprehension, which also shows. She has done so now, not only by making use of her universal rule, but in taking notice to the very great detriment and distraction of the trade of neutrals.

"I don't want to do away with wars for the future, we must put the price, but we should like to be freed from the necessity of still one country beyond the power of still one country to ruin the world by interfering with your business and restrictions. We want great, powerful England to be the mistress of the seas, but she should not be allowed to use her power to the detriment of all nations.

"Within their sphere the peoples have a right to take such measures for their defense as they think best, but the sending of mines and war machines into the territory of others or into neutralized parts of the world is a serious matter.

"The other alternative would be to forbid the high seas to men of war, to declare the abolishment to relegate them to the territorial waters and allow only small cruisers such as are necessary to avoid privateering.

"If that should be done the world as it is divided up now would come to a permanent peace."

Uncle Sam Sends His Soldiers and Sailors

To the Hot Springs of Arkansas, for the Relief and Cure of Rheumatism and Blood Disorders.

See List Below

The great Army and Navy Hospital located here reports results that most of the cases sent to them have turned to quite well. This is a confirmation of the certainty of relief that sufferers may expect. Many years ago, when Thomas Jefferson was President, the U. S. Government took notice of the therapeutic mountain scenery with the curious underground flow of hot water, which is the most notable of its kind in America for the cure of human ailments. So all of these springs were set aside and become a public reserve, under the direct control and supervision of the U. S. Government.

It is beyond comprehension the thousands upon thousands of lives that have since been saved through the healing powers of these springs. The waters are so charged with radium—known technically as radio-activity—that they accomplish results in the cure of disease that would under other treatment be considered impossible.

The ailments that most readily yield to these baths are Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Locomotor Ataxia, earlier stages), Bright's Disease (when not too far advanced), Liver and Bladder troubles, Skin and Blood diseases, troubles peculiar to women and other troubles of a nature kindred to those above mentioned.

Regarding these springs as America's greatest gift to the sick, the government has never allowed them to be exploited for private gain. The prices charged for the baths are strictly regulated—hotel charges are extremely low—and every consideration is afforded the visitor.

The city of Hot Springs is one of the most delightful resorts to be found anywhere in the United States, and its visitors are by no means confined to those seeking health.

The best of hotel accommodations, ideal climate, the four snowless months, picturesque mountain scenery with drives unobstructed by U. S. expert engineers, all contribute to make the Hot Springs of Arkansas the ideal resort of America.

Splendid facilities for all outdoor sports, excellent tennis courts, one of the finest golf links in the country, Base Ball Parks, etc.—live, up-to-date people dwelling there. Visitors from all parts of the country—Senators, Congressmen, capitalists, comfort, enjoyment and health.

Pegoud Worth Whole Army Corps to France

Aviator Inflicts Big Losses on the Germans

ALPHONSE PEGOUD, THE FAMOUS FRENCH AVIATOR, IN HIS MONOPLANE

PARIS, Jan. 9.—There is one man fighting for France whose value to the French arms is estimated by the general staff as the equivalent of one army corps.

He is Alphonse Pegoud, the aviator.

The "world's greatest airman" has inflicted tremendous losses on the Germans. He has been flying regularly and his flight is looked for each day with increased interest.

His flights are not short. He remains up on an average of eight hours every day destroying convoys, railroads, ammunition depots and killing hundreds upon hundreds of Germans with bombs and arrows.

PARIS learned today that Pegoud had come through unscathed though several of his machines had been destroyed.

As illustrating the chances he has taken and the daring with which he operates it is officially stated that the machines he has used have been pierced all told with 142 bullet holes.

BOSTONIAN TELLS OF GERMAN RAID

The AMERICAN has received a second letter from John F. Murphy, the Boston xylophone player and member of the Boston Municipal Band, who is England, who tells the German raid on the English coast towns of Whitby, Scarborough and Hartlepool has caused an apprehension among the English.

Mr. Murphy, who is known to the vaudeville world as "Murphy, the Xylophone King," wrote to the AMERICAN last Fall, describing the landing of Belgian refugees on the south coast of England. In the letter of this second writing, to Treasurer Ek, he says the people of Yorkshire and mobbed the inhabitants of Bridlington as follows:

"It was terrible to see the damage done by the German shells, the worst night I ever beheld in my life. It was heartrending to see the families of the victims around some of the ruins.

"The particular residence was practically demolished. The shells exploded as it struck and it is almost impossible to describe the manner in which the house was shattered.

"The worst part of the affair is the fact that some of the killed were women and children, the latter just wending their way to school. The poor little mites were killed instantly, with a few exceptions.

"In a school yard a shell struck and ploughed through the playground, and all the children around, a dozen or more children in all directions, strange to say not one was killed, except for a few minor bruises. The shell fell just to one side of where they were congregated.

"I visited Scarborough the following day and the sights there beggared description. It was simply terrible; that is all I can say. Though the loss of life was appalling, the people showed a wonderful spirit of calmness and very few left their homes.

"It's shameful to think that the Germans would bombard unfortified cities, such as they have done in this case. But you can publish for a fact that it has aroused a spirit in the hearts of the Englishmen such as was never known before. The way that recruiting has taken a bump in the past few days shows that Britain will be avenged and will hand the Kaiser a good receipt for the murderous work, an act wholly against the rules of war.

The cry heard everywhere now is, "Are we down-hearted?" The answer is, "No!" Very truly,

JACK MURPHY.

Why Cadum Is Good for Skin Diseases

The important thing in treating many skin diseases is to keep water away from the affected parts and make the covering as air tight as possible. This according to a very distinguished New York physician, seems to kill the germ and set up the healing process quickly. Cadum, the well-known skin remedy, supplies that kind of a covering and keeps out the air. This covering consists of petrolatum and white wax, which Cadum contains. Two other ingredients of Cadum are zinc oxide, which dries up the water that comes from the sores, and oil of cade, which is one of the oldest and best-known remedies for Eczema. Physicians everywhere employ oil of cade more often, perhaps, than any other one thing in treating Eczema. Cadum costs 50c for a trial box, while the 25c box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size.

CURLEY APPEALS FOR WOOL MEN

Asks Bryan to Intercede with England to Lift Embargo on Merino Wool.

On behalf of the wool interests of Boston and New England, Mayor Curley has written Secretary of State Bryan asking that measures be taken to induce Great Britain to modify the embargo on merino wool which has practically cut off all importation of wool into this country from England or her colonies.

The Mayor says that it is "only a question of weeks" till the supply of raw wool here will be exhausted, when the mills employing more than 20,000 operatives will be forced to shut down unless new supplies are forthcoming. He suggests that the embargo is a violation of the treaty rights of the United States and says:

"I appreciate the dire necessities of the present condition of the British Empire, and that she is justified in taking extreme measures in order to bring as great pressure as possible to bear upon her enemies, and I do not think the United States should take a technical or captious position, but in this case, where a large and powerful industry in this country, employing a great number of men, is threatened with the complete failure of its supply of raw material, and the consequent throwing out of work of a very large number of operatives, I think it is not only the right but the duty of the State Department to base up this question with Great Britain, especially in view of the fact that England's own immediate necessities have been fully supplied and there is no longer any reason to fear that free importation of merino wool into the United States would in any way jeopardize her own military requirements, or afford any assistance to her enemies.

"The United States in recent years has annually imported 160,000,000 pounds of wool from England and her dependencies, and the withdrawal of 'this source of supply from American business results from a contingency of this embargo can hardly be overestimated."

MRS. J. W. HARRINGTON, WHO HAS BEEN SECRET BRIDE FOUR MONTHS

Miss Mabel H. Cahoon, secretary to the advertising manager of the Jaynes Drug Company, and James W. Harrington, a Boston business man, were married more than four months ago and kept it secret until recently.

The wedding took place at the residence of the Rev. J. J. Lyons of St. Raphael's Church, West Medford, on August 17 last, but not a word was said about it until yesterday, when the bride made the announcement to a gathering of friends at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Cahoon, No. 81 Winthrop street, Medford. Belated congratulations then poured in upon the young people.

EXPLAIN FEDERAL PLAN FOR JOBLESS

Secretary Wilson Gives Details of President's Suggestion; Boston to Have Bureau.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Secretary of Labor Wilson today explained the full scope of the Federal Employment Bureau proposed by President Wilson in his Indianapolis speech.

"The purpose of the plan is to bring the jobless man and the manless job together," said Secretary Wilson. "We hope ultimately to be so thoroughly in touch with industrial conditions that we will know at all times just where all kinds of workmen are needed and by this means reduce unemployment to a minimum.

"We have taken for the purpose the system of information of this department. We have divided the country into zones, eighteen in number, eighteen immigration districts, and in each immigration district we establish an employment agency.

"We have obtained the cooperation of the Department of Agriculture and the Postoffice Department. The field agents of the Department of Agriculture will inform us of any opportunity of employment throughout the country, and by means of the postoffices we will convey the information to the unemployed.

"The cities where the federal employment agencies have been established already or are to be established at once are Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Galveston, Cleveland, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Denver, Helena, Mont., Seattle, Portland, Ore., San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The indictment, however, will not be dismissed, at least so long as District Attorney Lewis J. Smith, is county prosecutor.

PORT MEDICAL CHANGE OPPOSED

Steamship Men Say City Should Not Give System to Federal Authorities.

The men who are prominent in the steamship interests of the port of Boston are opposing with all the earnestness and determination at their command, a proposition, revived for the third time in recent years, to bring the transfer of the medical supervision of the port from local control, by the city, as it has existed since the port began, to control by the federal authorities at Washington.

To the proposal, the steamship men, who have the Chamber of Commerce with them in their fight, say "No." And they back their negative with a formidable line of reasons showing it would be a mighty bad thing for the port of Boston to make the change.

The change is sought, they allege, by Mayor Curley, so he will be able to receive some $250,000 from the national government for the quarantine station at Gallups Island and thus get the one of the best in the United States.

WOULD WORK HAVOC.

The steamboat men say that, even supposing the city does get that much money for giving up her own quarantine service and control, the change would work havoc in time with the shipping interests of the port.

At hearings that have been held before the City Council, those who advocate the change, give as one of their principal reasons the immense immigration that is to look in here after the war.

"Such an argument," said one of the steamship men yesterday, "is fallacious and misleading. After millions of men have been slain in this great war, which likely will not be over for some time, the countries of Europe will be so reduced in male population that those remaining will be needed and compelled to remain at home to repopulate the countries.

All the transatlantic ports of the country, with the exception of New Orleans, Portland, Me., and Portland, have their port medical inspection under either State or city control. The following figures for 1913 will show how Boston stands on passenger travel.

New York	1,260,987
Boston	97,364
Philadelphia	19,447
Baltimore	40,233
Galveston	16,266
New Orleans	12,645
Providence	12,293
Portland	11,917

ONLY TRANS-ATLANTIC.

The number for Boston only includes trans-Atlantic and West Indies business, and does not include 100,000 passengers from the Maritime Provinces.

J. F. Masters, superintendent of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, said yesterday to the AMERICAN:

"Persons not acquainted with the situation of passenger travel between Boston and the Provinces have no conception of the difficulties the Eastern Steamship Corporation, Portland Line and the Yarmouth Line encounter in holding their own against the all-rail competition.

"So finely drawn is this competition that a single case of hold-up of a steamer at quarantine would drive the passenger travel away to the rail lines. This is no exaggeration, for these companies readily reach the quarantine officials and they, while administering fully the strict regulations prescribed and in effect, whereby the health of the city is fully protected, yet have a consideration whereby this port is not unnecessarily discriminated against.

"In other words, the companies operating to the Provinces know how satisfactorily the present regulations are administered and they do not feel justified in agreeing to a change to absolute Federal control.

"We doubt if the present adequate and extensive facilities at the Boston Quarantine Station on Gallups Island are sufficiently understood by the members of the Council, and particularly those of the medical profession who are favoring the transfer of Quarantine to Federal control.

"Boston today has the second best quarantine station in the world.

"Last Wednesday I accompanied Charles Stewart, manager of the Cunard Line, to Quarantine station, and we were surprised to find the following conditions and arrangements.

"On Gallups Island are two detentions houses, each having 300 beds, one house for men and one for women. In other words, in these two houses are sleeping accommodation for 600 persons.

"There are also two hospital buildings which are fitted up very nicely with clean, comfortable beds holding 65 persons. In addition, there is a large barn which, with little expense and time, can be fitted up particularly in the Summer season, for 200 persons, thus giving accommodations for nearly a thousand persons."

"Knowing how interesting it would be to learn how the facilities at New York compare with Boston and in order to obtain definite information on the subject, Mr. Austin, receiver of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, wrote to Dr. Joseph J. O'Connell, head of the Quarantine Service there. The reply proves our assertion that the present quarantine facilities at Boston are more than ample to meet all requirements, for you will not New York, although it has ten times as many persons entering its port as Boston, has only accommodations for 1,000 persons, and it is the largest quarantine station in the world, while Boston has housing and sleeping accommodations for 937, and in the Summer season with tents, could accommodate a great many more."

NO ECONOMY.

The steamship people assert also that the change would mean no economy for the city, for if a local epidemic should break out the plant at Gallups Island would be found to be of the greatest importance to the Boston health authorities, as an auxiliary to the City Hospital.

One of the largest steamship business houses on State street is that of A. C. Lombard Sons. John F. Cusick of that firm said yesterday to the AMERICAN:

"If the best interests of the port of Boston are to prevail, this change from local to federal control should not be made. With all our efforts centred now upon the development of the port, it certainly does not seem sound business judgment to throw even the slightest obstacle in the way of quick handling of ships that come here. The owners of those vessels will not have too much liking for any port where dispatch is not used from the first moment the steamer enters the harbor. We have steamships coming here from China, Japan, India, Australia.

"Look at the vast expense of those ships. Suppose one of them loses even a single day owing to heavy weather at sea, the owners have to face heavy expense. And every hour's delay after she gets to harbor means so much added to that expense. It won't satisfy them to wire or cable that their steamer was held here at quarantine while somebody in Washington was being asked for authority for quickening or other—questions that our local doctor could answer in a second. We had better leave things as they are for the good of the port."

2 Manchester Boys Are Held in Newton

Sydney Groux, seventeen, and Edward Boyer, eighteen, of Manchester, N. H., found in Nonantum square, Newton, told the police they were on their way to the Panama-Pacific Exposition by way of Texas. Boyer had a loaded revolver, the police said, and explained that the weapon was for protection from "bad men and Indians." In the Newton Court Groux was held until Tuesday as a runaway and Boyer for carrying the revolver. In the meantime the police will communicate with their parents.

IS HELD AS RUNAWAY.

Patrolman Driscoll of the Court square station took into custody yesterday Harry Le Beau, seventeen, who is wanted as a runaway from the farm of Alphonse E. Brown of Lunenburg.

MRS. E. W. HATCH, Brockton, for whom search is made.

CALLS TO MISSING WIFE TO RETURN

Brockton Man Fears Another Woman, with Hypnotic Power, Is Detaining Her.

BROCKTON, Jan. 9.—For seven months search has been made for Ethel W. Hatch, wife of Alfred F. Hatch of North Hanover. Mr. Hatch's aged mother lies critically ill at the North Hanover homestead as a result of her daughter-in-law's absence.

Mr. Hatch believes that his wife is being kept from her home by the influence of a woman whose identity he knows.

"My wife left Brant Rock July 8," said Mr. Hatch. "She said she was going to the postoffice, but never returned. We received a card from her shortly after her departure. It was postmarked 'New York' and was in a man's handwriting. We have heard nothing from her since. I believe she is being kept away from home by the influence of a woman I know. This woman has always exerted an influence over her and I think the police should apprehend her.

"This woman has known my wife since she was two years old think the influence must be hypnotic. My poor old mother, who is eighty-three years of age, is now critically ill as a result of Mrs. Hatch's absence. She keeps calling for her and I am afraid she will die if I don't get her back soon. I think the woman is hiding her and I have reason to believe she is in or near Boston now.

"I think my wife will come back if she is permitted to go. I do not believe she ran away of her own accord."

Clements, Mrs. William Nutley, Mrs. J. Hoffman, Miss Mary Dacey, Mrs. John Fischer, Mrs. Francis J. O'Hara, Jr., Mrs. T. Edward Sheehan, Mrs. C. D. White, Mrs. John Nolan, Mrs. F. Give Whist to Aid Nuns of Belgium

About 300 women attended the whist party at the Vendome yesterday afternoon in aid of the Mother House of the Sisters of the Notre Dame in Belgium. Miss Gertrude Hayes, a graduate of the Roxbury Notre Dame Academy, was in charge of the whist, assisted by classmates. Miss Anna Whalen, Miss Mabie Fitzgerald, Miss Mary Miriam, Miss Gertrude Corrigan, Miss Mary Williamson, Mrs. Mott and Mrs. William O'Brien. Mrs. James J. Phelan, Mrs. William W. Taff, Mrs. James M. Morrison, Mrs. W. W. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Harvey C. Wheeler were the patronesses.

Mrs. Curley to Be Chairman of 'Made in America' League

Mrs. James M. Curley, wife of the Mayor, wired the national leaders of the movement at Washington last night her acceptance of an offer to become honorary chairman of the Woman's National Made in the United States of America League.

This organization is to conduct a nation-wide campaign for the purchase by Americans of strictly American-made goods. Women especially will be appealed to for assistance along these lines. If successful the movement will insure employment to hundreds of thousands of mechanics who today are idle. Mrs. Curley's telegram of acceptance, addressed to E. E. Poe, secretary, follows:

"I am very pleased to serve as honorary chairman of the woman's national movement designed to increase the sale of products manufactured in the United States and appeal to the patriotic spirit of our citizens to purchase home but goods that are labelled 'made in the United States.'

American manufacturers and workmen must have needed stimulation and encouragement and I am heartily in favor of this constructive work so potent of benefit to all America.

MARY E. CURLEY.

MEXICANS HERE TO STUDY SCHOOLS

The first commission ever sent to Boston by a national government—that of General Carranza, the Mexican military and civil leader—to make a study of our educational system, reached the city yesterday and the five women members took up quarters last night at the Franklin Square House, where they plan to remain for from two to three years.

The only one of the women who speaks English announced that the commission had been sent to this city because throughout South America, Boston is considered the greatest educational centre of the world.

General Carranza's government has provided ample funds for the seven members of the commission—five women teachers and two men—to remain until each has mastered the particular educational specialty to which he or she has been assigned.

The women were received by Secretary George W. Burgess at the school superintendent's office and with the aid of Miss Maria Selano, a Spanish teacher in the South Boston High School, their plans were outlined and they were shown over the city and taken to the Franklin Square House.

SIMMONS COLLEGE CLOSES EARLY TO RELIEVE GIRLS OF FENWAY PERILS AFTER DARK

President of School Puts Responsibility of Inadequate Protection Squarely Up to the Police Department. Thousand Students Are Given Warning of Danger.

Failing to secure [illegible] the police necessary, President Herbert [illegible] of Simmons College today publicly warned the [illegible] girls must avoid the Fenway after dark.

NOTICE

For the remainder of the present term the College building will be closed at 4:30 in the afternoon. All students are required to leave the building at that time.

President Lefavour said last night that responsibility for the Fenway squarely up to Stephen O'Meara, Boston police commissioner. He did not mention the Commissioner by name, but referred to the "police authorities."

"The Fenway, which [illegible] is not well protected by the police. It is a lonely path, bordered [illegible] upon the Fenway [illegible] boxes here [illegible] that [illegible] and [illegible] for [illegible] particularly [illegible] At [illegible] to the [illegible] to the [illegible] of [illegible] earlier [illegible] of the Fenway [illegible]

O'MEARA ALMOST SILENT

Police Commissioner O'Meara, when asked [illegible] Simmons College, said: "I do not care to say anything about the matter. It should be left to the [illegible] discretion. I am within sixty seconds [illegible] police.

"Of course you know I am not to be interviewed. I adopted that policy some time ago. I know what is about the Simmons College [illegible] that all is about to be [illegible] have declined [illegible] an hour earlier."

The Fenway is [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] streets [illegible] [illegible] Charlesgate West [illegible] avenue [illegible] [illegible] educational institutions [illegible] [illegible] come young women [illegible] [illegible] that every State [illegible]

The inactivity of the police and the consequent declaration of President Lefavour will undoubtedly be pounced upon to Boston's disadvantage by newspapers all over the United States.

In the district are Simmons College, Harvard Medical School, the Dental School, the Museum of Fine Arts and its school, the Isabella Gardner palace and other institutions of national fame and importance.

Don't Invest in Lots in Other States Without First Seeing Them.

Address all questions to the Real Estate Information Bureau, Boston AMERICAN. Questions should be plainly written on only one side of the paper. Full name and address of the inquirer must appear or the question will be disregarded. Place on the inquiry a letter and number under which look for reply. While using every endeavor to be accurate the AMERICAN does not guarantee nor will it be held responsible for the accuracy of its replies. Where realty outside the State is involved, answers may be subject to delay of one or two weeks.

In the former case you are obliged to pay off a small portion of the loan each month, besides meeting interest charges. At the end of about nine years the loan is liquidated. However, at any time, if for some unforeseen reason you are unable for a time to make payments, you may increase the loan to its original size, at least. The amount withdrawn to raise payments. In case of a savings bank loan, if you were unable to meet interest charges, the mortgage would be foreclosed.

REALTY EXCHANGE HAS ANNIVERSARY

Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Founding of Real Estate Exchange Celebrated Tomorrow.

In 1889 petition was entered with the Legislature for a charter. By special act the Real Estate Exchange was established with power to maintain a central business room for the sale of real estate and securities, a general meeting room for real estate men, [illegible] maps, plans, statistics and other records relating to real estate and allied subjects and for the general purpose of doing and transacting such other matters as [illegible] real estate interests and [illegible] may direct.

[illegible] seventh day of January, 1890, [illegible] new [illegible] held in the [illegible] building. The new organization began its work with 144 members, of which 73 were real estate brokers. It has expanded to 200 members, about equally divided between the middle and brokerage interests, a membership noteworthy for its high character and quality.

Since the establishment of the Exchange a number of changes have occurred in the Boston real estate situation, but the Boston Exchange is one and to-day the largest and most [illegible] body of its kind in the country. In [illegible] harbor improvements, the [illegible] of the city, in the [illegible] of the commonwealth, in the [illegible] of the Boston Exchange [illegible] for the protection of [illegible] interests of the community and the [illegible] of [illegible] real estate, for the [illegible] of [illegible] for the [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Embodies in Her Dances the Fantastic Conceptions of Bakst

Karsavina in "The Fire Bird"

TAMAR KARSAVINA, the beautiful Russian dancer, has become an idol of London. She incarnates fascinating, marvelously colored conceptions of the Russian artist, Leon Bakst.

She flashes before her enchanted audiences in the Arabian loveliness of "Scheherazade," in the Egyptian splendor of "Cleopatra," in the classic beauty of "Daphnis and Chloe," in the Hebrew allurements of "Salome," in the fragile setting of "The Ghost of the Rose," and in the fairyland realm of "The Fire Bird."

These two artists, Karsavina and Bakst, represent to Western Europe all that is most fascinating and strange in the Russian genius. At a moment when some Europeans have referred to the Russians as barbarous people, these two have taken pride in displaying their talents in the most charming fashion. What country can show a more brilliant artist than Bakst or a more exquisite dancer than Karsavina?

Karsavina is one of that band of Russian dancers who have raised their art beyond anything known in other countries. In technical perfection she is considered a worthy rival of the celebrated Anna Pavlowa, but many people find Karsavina a personality even more attractive.

Pavlowa is charming in appearance, but not strictly beautiful. Karsavina is really beautiful. The muscular strength which inevitably comes with so much dancing has not marred her grace in any way. All those who have seen the delightful figure which she so liberally reveals in such dances as "Scheherazade" must admit this.

Karsavina's feet touch the ground with the delicacy and exquisite timing of Paderewski's fingers on the keys of the piano. The movement of her whole body is a poem of motion. At one time she is as light as a Summer breeze and as graceful as a swaying palm tree. At another time she is ablaze with passion and as fierce as a charging tiger.

The variety of her talent is indeed extraordinary. From the Oriental sensuality of "Scheherazade" to the delicate mystical charm of "The Ghost of the Rose" is a journey from the tropics to the pole.

To say that Karsavina embodies Bakst drawings is literally true. When she plays "Salome" her beautiful legs bear stenciled designs made according to the artist's drawings. When she first gave this performance the artist did the stenciling himself, but it has not been possible for him to be in attendance on every occasion.

What Became of Mrs. Akers's Soul?
Was It Called Back from Heaven?
Why Does Her Spirit Not Remember What It Saw in the World Beyond?
Are Christ's Miracles Discredited?

Discussed by Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner

Pastor of Grace Methodist Church, West 104th Street, New York

THERE is no d[oubt] that [illegible] raised alive. Many specialists ag[ree] [illegible] extinct from a body; every test pro[ves] [illegible]ple have even been partially prepared for burial, when suddenly they revive and recover.

Even phys[icians] make n[o] [illegible] relationship is so mysterious that no one can be dogmatic. Even theologians had to learn that fact. The restoration of Mrs. Akers at Los Angeles doubtless was so marvelous as to be almost miraculous. It appears to be the first [illegible].

If it could be [illegible] [illegible] would be [illegible]. Naturally, the [illegible] to help them [illegible]. Zeal calls in [illegible] eager to reach the conclus[ion] [illegible] unconsciously forget to be [illegible]. They are honest, but may [illegible].

But let us suppose she was [illegible]. Would that discredit the miracles of Jesus?

By no means. He never claimed them to be unnatural. His unusual deeds were supernatural, that [illegible] above our known natural. Because Jesus was divine He had the power to call in higher laws.

That does not mean that man may not during some coming age so develop that he may enjoy the benefit of these higher laws. Christ's divinity did not lie in the fact that He could perform miracles, but in the fact that He could call into play all the higher laws far beyond man's present knowledge. No miracle of Jesus was contrary to nature, but beyond our knowledge.

The Miracles of the Saviour a Foreshadowing of Man's Miracles

Jesus raised three people from [illegible]. They say [illegible] (Luke, vii.) may have only be[en] [illegible] been known. The Jews, h[owever] [illegible] actual funeral procession [illegible] elapsed since the decease.

Jairus's daughter, h[owever] [illegible] barely possible that she [illegible] is not probable, for Je[sus] [illegible] can we conceive of His [illegible] from a trance to be accom[panied] from the dead.

The case of Lazarus [illegible]. He had lain in a sealed tomb f[our] [illegible] Master of Life brought h[im] [illegible].

The divinity of Jes[us] [illegible] or any of His miracles [illegible] ally believe in them m[ore] [illegible] our future liberty. Now we [illegible] by material things.

Some day distance [illegible] material [illegible] banished. Death will be [illegible]. He was not [illegible] right to teach by raising [illegible], but was [illegible] teachings. He refused to d[o] [illegible] to establish His authority. He was giving a vision of the future life.

The test of His divinity lies in the fact that His teaching and work among all people, everywhere and during all time. Other religions fit only one climate or one nation. The world outgrows them also. They become antiquated. People tire of these systems and doctrines. But the religion of Jesus fits [illegible] movement. It feeds into growth. Even if all the miracles should be taken away, the world could not disprove the efficiency of His teaching—that proves the case.

Further speculation is awakened if the Los Angeles woman was really dead. The materialist might claim that the physician restored life. But did he? Then why can he not create life? One is no harder than the other.

The chemist makes a grain of wheat exactly like that gathered in the field. But it will not grow. On the other hand, a grain of wheat 2,000 years old will grow in the other day. It produced stalk and kernels promptly. The mystery is deepened. What is life? Where does it come from and whither go?

The Mystery of Spirit Land That May Lie Close to Earth

Where was the soul during the ten minutes that the woman was really dead? No one knows.

Any one can conjecture [illegible] guesses worthy.

W. T. Stead felt sure that the departed spirits could communicate with earth. That does not [illegible] spiritualism that writes messages [illegible]. Professor William James also felt it to be [illegible]. The spirit world may be very near us. Loved ones [illegible] through memories' sweet pictures. Possibly they [illegible].

We send wireless messages [illegible] out of the air, and since its mystery cannot [illegible] we call it a "fluid" for convenience sake. It is [illegible], that the woman's spirit could have been liberated [illegible] body was no longer physically fit for the spirit to utilize as a medium or channel of expression.

Many a person has died from accident who if a surgeon had been present the body would have been mended [illegible] to hold the spirit. All physicians tell us that mothers [illegible] kept children alive who would otherwise have died by hovering over them with insistent denial to death. Patients have been [illegible] back to life by the physician [illegible] purpose to live. [illegible] done by spirit touching spirit. Many die when they "give up" and no longer desire to live. When people die it may be a matter [illegible] liberation of the spirit to wider fellowships. This spirit was called back if the Los Angeles woman was really dead before. Very far away from the body.

Again some [illegible] asks, "Why did she have no conscious knowledge of this other world?"

Again only a far-fetched conjecture can be made. The skeptic might [illegible] that there is no future life. The child cannot understand the anguish of her father when her mother is buried. She plays about the house where the corpse lies. Pain and anguish are, nevertheless, a fact. But the child has as yet no register for such a large experience.

No Organs or Faculties to Record Experiences in a Supernatural World

We have no faculty or organ to record experience in the world of spirits as do the eye and brain in the material world. The animal has the power to register commands and experiences and work out from these a set of habits, but the animal has no ability to put these things together and evolve a new conclusion. The animal lacks the power to reason. As man has faculties above the animal, so the inhabitants of the spirit world have faculties above man. Paul said after being caught up into the third heaven that he had visions "unlawful," or "unspeakable," words that were in [illegible] of utterance (II. Corinthians, 12-4).

Christians as a whole body do not [illegible] any exactly defined doctrines concerning [illegible] future life. Pastor Russell believes in the sleep of the dead [illegible] the resurrection day. The Roman Catholic Church pro[claims] Purgatory where the [illegible] never, however smitten by sin, may go to purify himself by suffering. Some Protestants announce th[at] there is an intermediate state where people not yet ready for heaven grow and improve until fit [illegible]. Others believe that man begins [illegible] continues to develop or to d[ecay] [illegible] to the thief on the cro[ss] [illegible] with Me in Paradise" [illegible] unconscious state of happ[iness].

Death comes when the bod[y] [illegible] conduct the soul's activities. W[ith] the [illegible] so promptly restored to a usable [illegible] being near, had no exc[use] to le[ave] [illegible] the wise person is afraid to die. O[ne] [illegible] or thing. I declare, "I am not afra[id] [illegible]. We do not depart this life until our w[ork] [illegible]. We need the use of all earth's [illegible] ties or else we will be pigmies in the next world. This departing soul may have strongly [illegible] marred condition, and hence sour [illegible] time of development. Ruskin followed [illegible] spirit. Dives wanted to come back [illegible] warn others. Many a man has been set to serious [illegible] gone near to death by accident or sickness. [illegible] may have desired to help friends [illegible].

In early days [illegible] and [illegible] Modern teachers are not so explicit in [illegible]. They do, however, believe in a future life, [illegible] individuality is preserved and fellowship [illegible] best type is possible. The transfiguration [illegible] Moses and Elias gathered with [illegible] tain top. Men must learn that a starved spiritual nature will shrivel as surely as a starved mental nature or a starved heart life.

RAISED FROM

How Mrs. Walter W. Akers, Who Di[ed] Brought Back to Life After She [Was]

AMONG the miracles of the Saviour which have [been] [illegible] impressed the minds and imaginations of [illegible]anity are those in which He raised the dead [illegible] to life—Jairus's daughter and Nain's widow's son.

Medical science now claims in the case of Mrs. Walter W. Akers, of Los Angeles, literally to have raised her from the dead, not by the exercise of spiritual force but by manipulation of her heart after it had ceased beating.

Mrs. Akers while undergoing an operation for gall stones, died. She remained dead for ten minutes.

Three minutes after he saw that life had passed Dr. S. S. Hutchison, the famous California surgeon, who was operating, thrust his hand through the surgical incision to Mrs. Akers's side and thrust it up past the intestines and other organs until he had grasped the heart.

This he began to manipulate, pressing it to counter feit its normal pulsation, while the assisting surgeons, Drs. P. M. Williams and W. S. Hutchison, carried on the usual movements of artificial respiration.

At the end of ten minutes Mrs. Akers came back to life. Her face began to heat and a pulse could be felt. The operation continued, and she is now on the road back to health.

Her case was not one of suspended animation or coma. There were all the signs of true death. [illegible] point the three surgeons are agreed.

Mrs. Akers was dead—and she was brought back to life.

Better than any layman could describe the case Dr. Williams tells its details for this newspaper. He says:

"If the science of medicine teaches anything it teaches the trained observer how to determine when the seal of death has been placed upon one who has passed on. This woman was dead. There is no question about it. Her heart was silent and as lifeless as it will ever be; the pulse, of course, was stilled, the eyes became fixed and took on the gloss of dissolution, the skin was ashen; the patient failed to respond to every test that could be immediately applied; artificial respiration produced no result. We summoned the husband to the death room. We had lost our battle.

"Then Dr. Hutchison deftly, gently, quickly inserted his right hand into the five-inch incision which had been made in the abdomen to the left of the navel and crowded it between the intestines, past the other organs, now as silent as a busy factory on a holiday, straight to the diaphragm against which the bottom of the heart rests.

"From this vantage point he was able, after a moment, to grasp the heart sac through only the few thin tissues separating it from the diaphragm.

"Then began one of the strangest battles for life ever waged by physicians. Here was a woman, dead now for at least three minutes, while the modern miracle apparatus of latter day science was organized and rushed to the battle line in almost no time.

"Nurses began the administration of oxygen. I took charge of the desperate attempt to induce an artificial respiration by moving the arms, the tongue, the walls of the chest—by resorting, in fact, to every means known to medicine and surgery.

"In the meantime Dr. Hutchison was about his business of heart manipulation. With his index finger at the top of the organ and his thumb at the bottom he commenced a gentle series of contraction and expansion—squeeze, release; contraction and expansion.

'At first there was no result. It seemed like hours; actually it was ten minutes. We had about given up the to form hope when there was the faintest flutter of the organ of life as it rested in the doctor's hand.

"I believe we've got her,' Dr. Hutchison said in a whisper. 'Keep it up,' meaning the artificial methods. Dr. Holman, the nurses and myself were using.

"Another moment and there was a faint but distinct respiration, another and another. As the newly started blood took up the oxygen the lungs grew stronger, and there before our very eyes we watched as in the case of a new born infant the beginning of life.

"After that the patient's recovery was very rapid—so rapid, in fact, that we were compelled to administer further anaesthetics before we could finish the operation.

"What happened? I don't know. The patient was in normal condition for the operation. Her heart action was good; the operation was proceeding along its usual course. [illegible] We sup[pose] paralysis [illegible] "But [illegible] "Fro[m] stopped. The blo[od] waiting [illegible] session [illegible] had be[en] "W[hen] Akers [illegible] heart [illegible] asked. Of course I don't know where it went, but the same soul or another soul must have re-entered the body, or else she is soulless."

This question and others on the same line have naturally arisen in the case, and they are discussed in full on another part of this page by the Rev. Christian F. Reisner, D. D., the brilliant pastor of Grace Methodist Church of New York.

Dr. Williams advances the theory that with further progress in the method of treatment it may become possible to restore many lives which are lost each year by sudden death—"heart failure." Fright or from some other causes in which the vital organs are not permanently damaged.

"I think it altogether probable," said the doctor, "that if such cases could be operated upon at once and the heart manipulated by direct action through an incision, a large percentage of them could be restored to life.

"Such treatment would have to be very rapid, before the blood changes were firmly fixed, and while there was still a chance to bring about an artificial exchange of gases and liquids."

The doctor would not admit the possibility of restoring life extinct for a number of hours, but he did say that through such artificial means as were induced in the Los Angeles case the heart might be kept at work, the blood circulating and rigor mortis and decomposition indefinitely postponed. "But in such cases," he said, "when the artificial manipulation stopped the operators would in most cases be right where they started."

Dr. Hutchison himself said that there was little to add. "The occurrence actually happened. The woman was just as dead as she ever will be, yet by the manipulation of the heart she literally came back to life and has an excellent chance of ultimately recovering from the operation, which in itself is not out of the ordinary."

Dr. Williams said that there are but few cases on record where life has been reinduced, and probably none where the period of apparent complete dissolution was as long as in this instance.

"I do not call it a state of suspended animation or coma," he repeated, "because the patient was dead. As a medical practitioner I know of no methods whereby death could be more conclusively shown than it was in this case."

Of course, it may be argued that if one did everything to assure oneself of actual death there would be no time to do anything for the patient that at the end of examination life would have been gone too long ever to return. But unless every test is tried how can we be sure that life was actually extinct?

A Dead Surgeon's "Description" of the Soul's Life After Death

THE most remarkable description of the life beyond the grave alleged to have been communicated by the dead is contained in the "letters" of Dr. Wadsworth Cecil Tuck, of Boston, when living, to his mother. Dr. Tuck was the son of Lorenzo and Lucy W. Tuck. His mother was one of the first of women physicians. Dr. Tuck was graduated from Harvard Medical School, and while house physician at Boston City Hospital in 1883 died of diphtheria.

He had been an agnostic, had no belief in spiritualism and no interest in it. Six years after his death his mother was told that a certain "medium" was receiving letters from Dr. Tuck meant for her. Mrs. Tuck investigated. The "letters" were written through the medium, her arm only being used for the transmission of words. Mrs. Tuck was convinced of their authenticity. The communications went on for a number of years. Then the medium died. Mrs. Tuck was never able thereafter to receive any further communications. She received had the letters privately ... [illegible] ... mourn their dead.

The word beyond the ... to his mother is not in the material universe. It is close to it, and yet infinitely removed—a Fourth Dimensional concept. It has a Borderland and many spheres. Upon the shores of the border land beats a great air sea and over this air sea all the souls that leave earth must be borne.

"Many physicians work with me," runs one of the letters, "for the birth of the spirit is never born even so well as a ... into earth. The habits have distorted the magnetic pulp ... bodies, and there are taints that approach rottenness. A ... to be purified by what for want of a better word I will call ... trical method. ... [illegible] ... the soul cells as is the sense or habit ... feel ...

"I watched ... [illegible] ... membrans that covered it after it slipped from the ... bone. It reminded me of the chicks that used to break shells ... out home. The doctors were treating it. Suddenly there came a naturalness, and the soul was born, the body well formed and the spirit said, 'Am I dead?'

"It is a good country. I have seen no particular Jesus. I see no God, either but I am sure a some one exists to carry us onward. I was told that Christs were sent into all earths so as to carry the trait of truth.

"We now have a very pretty home in the third country," he writes in a letter dated 1891. "It is half way between earth and the celestial lands. I like it, because as I work in borderland it is more natural to me. And then for study I rise into the third country, and the little ones are at school there, and come across the air in carriages, which move along either as a stream of light.

"This land is so full of electricity and warmth that fruit is already prepared with most delicious of tastes, and there are classes of working spirits who prepare all needs—not considered servants, but doing their part in the great universal order. They love their work, or else they would not be allowed to do it. Other spirits are busy with the looms and weaving, and so on.

"You must not think of our house as brick on brick or of wood sawed and planed, for the art of building is carried much higher here. Gold and gems may be dissolved and formed into walls and fitted together. We have a very pretty house. It is crystal, just as water congeals on a window pane, only congealed chemically and intermingled with our will and love. These two powers hold all shapes firm. We ourselves are actually built in our house. But we can draw ourselves out when we wish.

"I like to have a little tea table and gather around it ... we feel the hour for hunger ... and thirst (this ... come, and both of them can now ... sensation elevated). So all our dishes are just about ... and called elementary ... last while the need ... If we ... use a pretty shape ... longer than ideal strength ... by a second making ... bath in the skill in glass ... [illegible] ... and washed and stored.

"In these worlds ... are as friends and not wives. ... here, because ... of others any more than ... to know the future ...

"My ... I have ... from ... with ... and ... [illegible] ... every one ... united. The ... to work ... gods down ... from kill, and great ... naman or a Frenchman ...

"In all my travels ... men and women suffering ... ized and closed up in an egg for ... balm mummies. I have seen ... be treated for habits and ... should say all was a sanitarium ... heaven either, only worlds and ... one may go. Some so bright that ...

"It is not ministers here that ... And truly I think if in earth the ... disease there would be ... exclude sin, and so no need of ... perhaps as social bodies, where the ... be exchanged.

"I feel quite like a minister ... among our people and clearly see ... working of the true law. I strive to make the spirit body compact, complete in its power, without egotism, pride or self in it, and then I know the law will do the rest, and, running easily through the delicate frame or outer spiritual case, create beauty, holiness and truth.

THAT SUCCESS IS PURELY RELATIVE. FROM MY STAND POINT (OR SITTING POINT,) THIS WAS N'T A SUCCESS. BUT FROM YOUR VIEW IT WAS— I HOPE. ANYTHING THAT GETS A LAUGH IS WHAT I CALL A SUCCESS. IT WOULD N'T BE A SUCCESS IF A FUNERAL ORATION GOT A LAUGH. WHAT IS A BIG SUCCESS WITH ONE MAN IS A BIG FAILURE WITH ANOTHER. I KNOW A MAN WHO WAS A SUCCESS AT BEING POOR AND STRUGGLING UPWARD, BUT WHEN HE ATTAINED SUCCESS HE BECAME A GREAT FAILURE. THE MAN WHO DOES WHAT HE LIKES TO DO AND GETS FAIRLY PAID FOR IT IS A SUCCESS— HE IS HAPPY AND CONTENTED. MUCH MONEY HAS MADE MORE FAILURES THAN SUCCESSES. MUCH MONEY MAKES MORE UNHAPPINESS THAN IT DOES HAPPINESS. WHAT DO WE CALL MUCH MONEY? THAT IS ALSO RELATIVE. WHAT WOULD TIGE WANT WITH A MILLION DOLLARS

Good-bye Ant-Lion, Unicorn, Basilisk--Other Superstitions

Two kinds of hideous monsters inhabited this world ages ago. They were monsters of the forests, swamps and deserts—real, substantial things.

And there were the monsters created in men's minds even more harmful than the monsters created by Nature to vex man and each other.

Science has destroyed the monsters of the human brain—the hideous superstitions and false beliefs, very largely—just as man with his improved weapons has destroyed the other monsters.

IF you are ever gloomy, pessimistic about the human race, you ought to recall what humanity and its stupid beliefs USED TO BE.

To-day, by way of emphasizing the fact that the world does move forward, that superstition, ignorance and brutuality are drifting back, we concentrate attention upon a few of the amazing, fascinating, child ish beliefs that once filled every human mind, with a few intelligent exceptions.

Even the little child of our day would say, 'Surely nobody ever BELIEVED in such monsters. Nobody believed in the basilisk that could kill a man by looking at him.

"Nobody believed in the ant-lion, half ant and half lion; nobody believed in the phoenix, burned and then rising from its own ashes."

But EVERYBODY believed in those things And a plain narrative of some of the beliefs, all left behind us now, will make us realize that progress is REAL.

Human beings used to believe that the world was created by hand by the power ruling us, just as the carpenter with his tools makes the box.

Some believed that the sun, the moon and the stars were created first—AND THE LIGHT AFTERWARD.

It is not so long since the most powerful teaching authority of Cambridge, "as the result of most profound and exhausted study," announced

"Heaven and earth, centre and circumference, were created all together, in the same instant, and clouds full of water," and that "this work took place and man was created by the Trinity on October 23, 4004 B. C., at nine o'clock in the morning."

And the fathers of those still living might have known the great danger in which Buffon, the naturalist, stood—the danger of being burned alive, because he announced some simple truths of geology.

Very hastily and humbly he published his recantation:

"I abandon everything in my book respecting the formation of the earth, and generally all which may be contrary to the narrative of Moses."

You have all studied geology. You know the various layers of the earth as you go down deeper and deeper tell the story of the earth's history and of the vanished life upon it.

At a certain depth you find coal—never below a certain stratum. The earth's period of life during which the coal accumulated WAS SEVEN MILLIONS OF YEARS. But they burned a great many thousand people for saying that the world was more than six thousand years old or denying that it was made in a few hours.

Within our time, when learned scientists prove that the earth was made up of these various strata, with strange animals in them, with twistings and upheavals that proved how the great forces of nature had been at work, religious gentlemen asserted that the Lord God had done this to deceive men and mix them up

And the big fossils in the ground were accounted for by the statement that these were animals with which the Lord had experimented just making the shape out of earth, but not breath ing life into them.

It has taken men a long time to get away from the beliefs that seem to us impossible. Here are a few of the beliefs; think them over

Men believed that the serpent which tempted Eve, and all other serpents, used to walk along on the tip end of their tails. When that serpent behaved so badly they were all sentenced to walk on their stomachs.

Our ancestors all believed in the unicorn, the cockatrice, the basilisk, the phoenix and the ant lion

They believed that the basilisk could kill a man by looking at him. Some men wondered why more men were not killed, as the basilisk surely must be looking around while on his walks. Then it was said that the Lord mercifully had commanded the basilisk to cry aloud at least twice when he left his hole.

They gave dates and names to prove that the basilisk killed with a glance. This same basilisk who could kill men with a glance of his eye could kill serpents with his breath.

The lion, noblest of beasts, according to the old beliefs, wiped out the tracks made by his feet with the end of his tail as he went along. That large tuft at the end of his tail was mercifully given to him that he might wipe out his foot prints and escape.

It was not explained why the lion hunters failed to follow the marks of the tuft on the tail—certainly as plain as the footprints.

They believed that when certain kinds of fruit fell into the water birds were born from the fruit

They believed that the phoenix rose from his ashes—and it was only quite recently that a man dared to say that he doubted it, because all birds come from eggs, not from ashes

Most interesting of these ancient beliefs is that concerning the "ant-lion." Job mentioned the old lion that perishes for lack of prey

Study and discussion of the difficult Hebrew word caused this to be translated finally into the 'ant-lion." And then this interesting animal was described thus

"As to the ant-lion, his father hath the shape of a lion, his mother that of an ant: the father liveth upon flesh and the mother upon herbs; these bring forth the ant-lion, a compound of both and in part like to either; for his forepart is like that of a lion and his hind part like that of an ant. Being thus composed, he is neither able to eat flesh like his father nor herbs like his mother, and so he perisheth."

Can you imagine any more interesting animal than that, with an ant for his mother and a lion for his father, and unable to eat either vegetables or meat and so dying of hunger?

There IS just one more interesting animal and that is the man who is able to believe it

* * *

Then there was the cockatrice You have read in the Bible that the little child in the happy days to come might safely put his hands upon the cockatrice den

These are some of the things that a very reverend English gentleman had to say about the cockatrice—a gentleman named Bartholomew

"He driveth and burneth leaves with his look and he is of so great venom and perilous that he slayeth and wasteth him that nigheth him without tarrying; and yet the weasel overcometh him, for the biting of the weasel is death to the cockatrice Nevertheless the biting of the cockatrice is deadly to the weasel if the weasel eat not rue before."

The same reverend gentleman also tells us that the best thing is to burn the cockatrice to ashes Then he loses all his venom. And his ashes are very useful in "turning and changing of metal" that is to say, in making cheap metals into gold

The same reverend teacher tells us that "if the crocodile findeth a man by the water's brim he slayeth him, and then he weepeth over him and swalloweth him."

We are told also that the ordinary, everyday lion is born and lies dead for three days—worrying his mother considerably, probably

Then the father comes along at the end of three days and breathes on the young dead lions; they come to life, and they go out and begin their career

Very interesting also is this reverend gentleman's description of the dragon

"The dragon is the greatest of all serpents, and oft he is drawn out of his den and riseth up into the air, and the air is moved by him, and also the sea swelleth against his venom, and he hath a crest, and reareth his tongue, and hath teeth like a saw, and hath strength and not only in teeth but in tail, and greeteth with biting and with stinging. Whom he meeteth he slayeth

"Oft four or five of them fasten their tails together and rear up their heads, and sail over the sea to get good meat

"Between elephants and dragons is everlasting fighting; for the dragon with his tail spanneth the elephant, and the elephant with his nose throweth down the dragon. . . . The cause why the dragon desireth his blood is the coldness thereof, by the which the dragon desireth to cool himself Jerome saith that the dragon is a full thirsty beast, insomuch that he openeth his mouth against the wind to quench the burning of his thirst in that wise Therefore, when he seeth ships in great wind he fleeth against the sail to take the cold wind, and overthroweth the ship

For hundreds of years these things and many others as childishly fantastic were believed solemnly.

And bear in mind that it was dangerous NOT TO BELIEVE And particularly dangerous to discover new truths

Galileo, the great genius and glory of the race, learned this to his cost. For after he had discovered that our globe is a little grain of sand in the universe circling around our sun, and lighted by the sun's rays he was told that it was blasphemous to say so, and this is what he was compelled to say in public

I, Galileo, being in my seventieth year, being a prisoner and on my knees, and before Your Eminences, having before my eyes the Holy Gospel, which I touch with my hands, abjure, curse and detest the error and the heresy of the movement of the earth

You who study astronomy who know that the distant tiny star is a great sun with planets around it, that our own sun is but one of millions, think of the arguments that were opposed to Galileo's marvellous discovery now accepted by every child by every human being, except the ignorant savage

Galileo, humbled in his old age, was told that there could not possibly be more than seven planets, and that this was "PROVED" by the seven golden candlesticks of the Apocalypse, by the seven brass candlesticks of the tabernacle and by the seven churches of Asia

When he asserted that the sun was the centre and that the planets moved around it Galileo was told by the authorities that the earth could not possibly move as the other planets moved about the earth, for each of those was moved by an angel, whose particular business it was to keep it moving

There was no angel here on the earth to move the earth as the other things moved

If it moved at all, it would have to be moved by the devil

And he was set up in the middle of the earth and couldn't move it

In the face of the dreadful and cowardly persecution to which he was submitted, it is glorious to think of that old man Galileo, continuing his studies, in prison or out of prison, forbidden to travel, threatened repeatedly with the torture yet studying the heavens, announcing his discoveries, RISKING LIFE FOR THE TRUTH

* * *

Readers, every book of accurate history proves that men and the world are better and freer.

Men murder each other here in war. But they do not torture each other's bodies deliberately, or torture the conscience of men, or force stupid and hideous beliefs upon them

When at last they raised a monument to Galileo, and put the word "famous" on that monument, although he had been long dead, they were compelled to change the word "famous" to "notorious."

But to day every city would be proud to erect a monument to the man

His fame grows, those that vilely persecuted him are remembered only because of HIS memory

The basilisk, the unicorn, the cockatrice, the ant lion and BRUTAL SUPERSTITIOUS PERSECUTION ARE ALL GONE. AND THE WORLD IS BETTER

Again we urge upon our readers that they should purchase and read Buckle's "History of Civilization in England." It gives the history of thought, the history of truth, the history of man's marvellous progress. That work in four volumes can be purchased for $1.00 of any book store or of Hearst's International Library Company, No. 119 West Fortieth street, New York City The man who does not know the truths it contains and does not study it and make it his own has himself to blame if he dies ignorant—blind to the wonderful history of the human race—a pitiful persecution, the marvellous courage of great scientific mind rising above fear.]

Helping the Erring Man or Woman

The following letter gives an unmistakable terms the views of one woman who believes herself entitled to the adjective "good" before her name:

"Contagious cases are quarantined, the insane are restrained in asylums, lepers are placed in a penal human interest, the purulent cancer is critical; yet, quarantined cases are sacredly cared for by trained nurses, the insane re[ceive] the best of professional care and [the] victim of the leper and [the] cancer case are min[istered] to by angelic beings who [risk] their existence [in the] interests of love.

"So it is with our individual [problem]. It is an order of nature and of our principle that the seriously sick should not mingle with the healthy, that the seriously unbalanced of spirit should not be received into the society of the pure minded and heart and body.

"It is perfectly true that there is no human gauge for the standard of purity of mind and heart. The closest rating that can possibly be obtained is traced to the society that we mingle with.

"Such being the case, should the society of the impure, with its stigma, its possibilities, its overformal qualms and allurements be thrust on the company of your wife and children?

"No, most emphatically.

"Heat and cold, light and dark[ness], [illegible] and dog were [illegible] family shelter.

The writer of the letter does not seem to realize that goodness is by no means [illegible] and that a diversity of opinion [exists] even among hotels regarding diseases that are [illegible] work us.

Sickness, [illegible] sin, are unnatural conditions. Health and morality are normal states.

One who keeps himself in good health and obeys all the laws of nature can be exposed to all sorts of contagious maladies and not contract them, while he can give health and vital force to the weary by his presence. This is occurring daily, where nurses maintain perfect health in caring for the sick.

Good people who are really good (not [illegible] thoughts and acts, and filled with high aspirations) should have no fear of being contaminated by the presence in their midst of some unfortunate sister or brother who has made a misstep in the road of life and fallen into the dust.

The Armed Yellow Fist---The Asiatic Peril as an Asian Sees It

By ACHMED ABDULLAH

[illegible] press, German letter writers [illegible] papers and [illegible] [illegible] ones of many learned German professors to the American people are full of indignation [illegible] France and England are not only aiding with [illegible] Asiatic Russia, but are also using colored troops in the present European campaign. France is using Moors and blacks and England, after unleashing the hordes of Nippon, is beginning to throw her turbaned fighting men into the scales of victory. There is little doubt in any mind that this colossal, wordless [illegible] German indignation is really [illegible] rage, for the German intrigues with [illegible] another Asian nation, antedate [illegible] invasion of Belgium. To me it is the wail of the bad loser at a poker game, played for [illegible] who sees his four pat kings beaten by [illegible] with four aces.

But underneath this apparently [illegible] howl there lies a serious, if unconscious, appreciation of the red peril which sooner or later will come out of the east to threaten the structure of religion, progress and civilization which the Europeans and the Americans have built up. [illegible] discovered that [illegible] powder is superior to Oriental fatalism and that missionaries make a capital vanguard for a modern army bent upon thefts of territory. The cultural structure is quite imposing. Built [illegible] the engine of the white race and corrupted by [illegible] blood, it seems [illegible] invincible) and [illegible] as a card-house which will crumble down sooner or later in the mess of its own wooden guts.

"WE BEG TO ADVISE."

[illegible] a few years ago Japan, in a spirit of grim humor, copied the bullying German attitude of a few years back, when the might of Europe forced Nippon to give up the major part of her Chinese conquests. Germany said "begged to advise Japan." Now Japan begged to advise Germany." Whence great indignation in the Wilhelm Strasse at the [illegible] arrogance of these barbarians! Of course they are barbarians! Who has ever heard of Japanese achievements of Japanese commerce and arts?

And so the little black-eyed children in the streets of Kamakura are laughing behind their [illegible] even while giving thanks to inscrutable Amida Buddha.

A larger proportion of the men are, of course, Sikhs, to whom tobacco is forbidden; the Havildar Major himself was a Sikh of the Sikhs. SUNDAY AMERICAN'S WAR PICTURES

Inhabitants of Lermaise-les-Bains standing among the wreckage of their homes after the German bombardment ceased. This picture is only one of many which show the frightful destruction in all sections of the territory on which the allies and the Germans have been fighting for months. Thousands are homeless and many more thousands are living among the ruins.

Breakfasting Before the Fight—German soldiers are here shown being served with an early morning meal outside their hut, built into the side of a hill. They announced themselves "right at home" to the photographer who made the picture.

German Advanced Lookouts—The duties of these lookouts are many. On them rests the responsibility of detecting any sudden advance of the enemy's troops. The covering affords excellent shelter, besides screening them from the opposing troops.

Washington, December 26.—Secretary Bryan said today that the United States Government was continuing its efforts with the Gutierrez Government to obtain a general amnesty for political offenders, both in and out of Mexico. He declared the question of recognition of the Gutierrez administration had not been considered, nor the amnesty had not been asked as prerequisite of recognition.

Much interest is being manifested by officials here in the safety of former Governor Ihrhbie, who was permitted to leave Mexico City for the United States, through the influence of the American Government. General Pelaez, a Zapata adherent and member of the Gutierrez Cabinet, is quoted as saying that Ihrbie would be arrested if caught before he reached the border. Should this occur, it is probable urgent representations in his behalf would be renewed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—Manila dispatches received by American newspapers during the past week dealing with a threatened Filipino revolt and an alleged plot to free prisoners on Corregidor Island and start an uprising, are proving puzzling and annoying to officials of the Administration. Officials of the War Department asserted, [illegible] the impression of one of them that there was absolutely no

We Endure Anarchy in Mexico; Must the Philippines Suffer It?

THE testimony of ex President Taft before the Senate Philippines Committee now considering the Jones bill, is of the utmost importance. No man in the United States could be more thoroughly informed as to Philippine needs and possibilities than the man who grappled with their problems as chairman of the first Philippine Commission, Governor General of the Islands, Secretary of War and President. His opinion is admittedly personal, thorough and unprejudiced. He believes in the Filipinos, he won their confidence and it was under his eyes and hand that their first steps toward local self-government were taken.

Judge Taft is sufficiently detached from political or partisan activity to free his expression of opinion [illegible] his judgment of facts, from any special bias of any sort. When he says that it "will take more than one generation, and probably two, if we count a generation as thirty years," to make the Filipinos fit for self-government his words carry conviction. And the Congress, which is discussing the proposition formally to promise to Filipinos absolute independence of American rule may well stop to ponder these words of the ex-President:

"Mark my prediction: If they get independence within the year 1920, for instance, you will find just such a condition as you have today in Mexico."

What is the condition today in Mexico? The American presents to its readers just a few of the headlines gathered from its contemporaries of every political policy and affiliation, which show the extent of anarchy now prevailing in that land of revolution. With these we present [illegible] menace of like condition in the Philippines already apparent, and increasing in menace with the growing conviction of the [illegible] that our Government will manifest there the inefficiency that has brought Mexico to its present [illegible]

Our Government has shown itself incompetent to end anarchy in Mexico, to establish peace in Mexico. With the American [illegible] situation [illegible] confronting it, patent in [illegible] the disagreement with [illegible] state of eternal riot and revolution [illegible] Philippines.

Two years after we acquired the Philippines the Democratic party [illegible] Mr. Bryan upon a platform which specifically declared the paramount issue of the campaign to be the handing over of the Philippine Islands to their people. These planks in the platform were practically ignored. The eloquent candidate of democracy devoted his best oratory to preaching from the text that "all men would derive their just powers from the consent of the governed," and the enormity [illegible] And [illegible] that, with all our advanced civilization, we could possibly help the Filipinos [illegible] was [illegible] and do [illegible] pino as a grown-up person could help a child was bitterly denounced from every Democratic platform.

But when the parties went to the people on Mr. Bryan's own "paramount issue" of Philippine independence Mr. Bryan was overwhelmingly defeated—defeated more decisively than when free silver was the dominant question.

That was a scant fifteen years ago. Now comes the Democratic party with the Jones bill, seeking to reopen the question on which the American people have already decisively spoken. Our people are sometimes reproached for their short memories, but they are not so short as that would imply.

If the nation repudiated the Bryan idea in 1900, how much more vigorous would be its repudiation today, when distressed Mexico shows its result in its most highly developed form? Not American interests in Mexico alone, but American prestige the world over has been weakened because we have failed to deal with Mexico in a spirit of firmness in support of peace and order. The failure of the Administration in its Mexican policy has given foreign nations an added sense of our inefficiency in dealing with all international questions.

So far as Mexico is concerned, absolute anarchy, utter devastation and destruction prevail from one end of the land to the other. Americans are outraged and their rights and interests utterly ignored. The Administration at Washington feebly and futilely protests occasionally, but these protests are treated by every faction in Mexico with complete contempt. Our protests are meaningless and resultless, since it is known that they can be disregarded without danger.

The Administration never enforces its demands or takes any positive steps to protect American interests. As a result the United States and the citizens of the United States are held as unworthy of consideration by the Mexican rioters and revolutionists. Our country has lost all dignity, all prestige, all influence. Our Administration is failing to do its duty not only to its own citizens, but to civilization generally.

Foreign nations that ask our aid in defence of their citizens in Mexico, as in the Benton case, find our Government without power or purpose to fulfil its obligations to its own citizens or theirs. The Monroe Doctrine, maintained for a hundred years, is for the first time brought into contempt.

We prate of our desire for peace, and yet we meddle aimlessly and ignorantly in Mexican internal politics to depose one ruler and exalt another, and yet we have never had the knowledge of Mexican conditions or the plain common sense to give moral support to Francisco Villa, the one man of sufficient force and following to make a stable government in Mexico at least a possibility. We permit and by our weakness and incompetency actually aggravate in Mexico the anarchy which is the opposite of peace and order.

Surely this country cannot afford to impose another Mexican situation upon the world. It is bad enough weakly to fail in our duty in a nation adjoining ours, and within our legitimate sphere of influence, but it would be worse to fail in those islands which are actually ours, and which have been reposed, by events which seemed providential, in our safeguarding and safekeeping.

Our National Defences; Their Necessary Extension

To the Editor of the AMERICAN:

Sir—Despite the cold water thrown on the matter by President Wilson the country will [illegible] to face squarely the question of [illegible] defences. The writer has read the editorials in your paper with care and also several contributions concerning the [illegible] As I was among the very first to take part in this matter, I should like to state a few facts.

My intent to investigate the condition [illegible] was arousing the people. But it [illegible] really necessary for its own sake. Our [illegible] condition is clear by a little reflection on the vast extent of our coastline compared with the size of our navy, the case of [illegible] at various spots, and the lack of a standing army or of State militia of any size worth notice in the present conditions.

This [illegible] military experts, not for laymen, to determine what we need. It is for us to allow [illegible] the means to carry out in full their proposals. Probably, militia training for six to eight months should be afforded not only to volunteers, who may be far too few, but should be imposed, as soon as feasible, on every male able citizen under fifty years of age. This proposition, however, is my personal opinion, and has not been officially endorsed by the governors of the American Defence League.

The whole subject first engaged my attention shortly before the attack on Antwerp. I discussed it then several times and at length with a friend [illegible] some weeks later entered into [illegible] with Mr. Gardner who had made his well-known speech in Congress on December 15.

A number of acquaintances and myself formed the American Defence League, with a platform not for inquiry but for the purpose of rendering the United States "more secure from foreign attack and to do anything and all [illegible] to carry out such design." Since then we have gotten in touch with various patriotic citizens throughout the country. Probably as the war proceeds many more will indorse our plan, which is the only logical one, if we are going to build up defences at all.

I have made the above statements at some length so that it may be readily judged how far talk about a "source of spring source," "ammunition plants" and "powder trust lobby" is correct. I am perfectly free to say, however, that I can see no reason why a patriotic citizen may not aid his own country because it may happen that a "business" demand for his services or his goods may chance to arise.

Now, as to the real question on which altogether too little has been uprinted. The underlying motives in this war of both Japan and Germany are due to their pressing need for colonies. The population of these countries is dense to a degree hard for us rightly to conceive. Germany, in an area less than that of Texas, has two-thirds the whole population of the United States; Japan, in an area just about the size of Montana, has over one half of the whole population of the United States. If its colony of Formosa be included there are about fifteen million more inhabitants to be reckoned with, but Japan and Formosa together have an area less than Texas.

The Germans want Canada, the Japanese either part of Mexico or, if they dare, California. In any event an imperilling of the Monroe Doctrine will be inevitable. Twenty-five thousand or fifty thousand trained veterans could subdue the Californians, and this part of our country would be singularly hard for us to retake, owing to the few railroads which cross the Great Divide and the immense extent of the Western Desert. Those who imagine England would restrain her ally should notice that this country is already back in some of her habits of 1812 and has interfered with some of our vessels already.

With a federal administration in dreamland, everyone who has at heart our national safety must realize that it is a long way from speeches or investigations to a huge military armament, and that one fight may in the end take a political turn. One thing also is certain, and that is, this matter must be handled with such effective guarantees to the labor unions that they shall be sure it may never be used in capitalistic disputes.

WHY MAYOR CURLEY FORBADE THE DANCE

And How Mr. Hooper-Hooper Defied the Executive Ukase and Vindicated the Right of Boston Society to Dance After 2 A. M. at the Annual Assembly at the Copley Plaza.

IT was a modern Mayor, Sir,
He would stop th' Assembly Ball.
"By the Sacred Cod and his glitt'ring scales,
Now wherefore stopp'st us all?
The floor is waxed, the laws relaxed,
The 'Blue Book Set' is here.
Nor law nor cop should bid us stop.
A midnight dance is drear."

The Mayor stood. "The law is good,"
Quoth he, "till 2 o'clock."
They danced till three. Can such things be,
O, Land of Plymouth Rock!
(Rime of an Ancient Mariner—revised.)

Hooper-Hooper Wins, Declares the Mayor, When the Ruling on Dance Regulation Is Announced.

Not [illegible] society [illegible] stirred up over the controversy between Mayor Curley and Mr. Hooper Hooper about the assembly dance on Friday night.

The Mayor, as chief executive of this great metropolitan city, appeared as champion of the Law.

The question at issue was:

Did the guests of the assembly, under Mr. Hooper-Hooper's leadership, violate the law by dancing after the legal limit fixed by ordinance at 2 o'clock a. m.?

Mayor Curley was informed that they did, and rose valorously to the occasion.

"The law," said he, "is the law. It applies to the affluent as well as to the poor. It forbids public dancing by the ladies and gentlemen of Beacon Hill after 2 a. m. as well as by the shop girls of the South End. There is only one law for the rich and poor alike. Private [illegible] tal 'P.' is not to be tolerated.

HOOPER-HOOPER OBJECTED

To this Mr. Hooper-Hooper [illegible] Mayor Curley must be laboring under a misapprehension; that the assembly dance was a private affair, not in the least governed by the law which regulates public dancing. Addressed his Star-Mate North Star
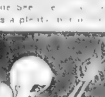
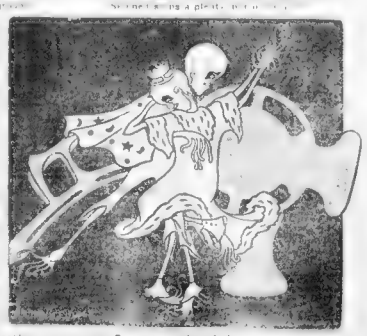
Of interest to the King of Spain
I see a half a dozen fleet
Alive with damsel dames in
The men have togs that are appropriate
To have point lingerie flirtations

But, oh, the King, these
The motors they are going
We've never seen such stunts, I say
On all the spheres I've been on
They dip and wiggle, run and jump
Then grab each other with a bump-
They trot and amble, scamper round
Links! There goes one upon the grass





He grabbed the King

Who, having caught the joyful sound,
Now joined the Seer
o'er chair and couch
Skinned shins a plenty,
but no "Ouch!"

Now bounces up the stunned one, see!
Great Saturn! What redundancy!

It's all part of the gen'ral scheme."

The porter rushing to the door
Sees both at last sink to the floor,
A wiggling mass—quoth he "Egad!
My Sire and Seer have both gone mad!"

Sully's Carbarberet Shop

SULLY'S barber shop in New York is a great hang-out for actors. None but actors go in there. No one dares to. Sully says he wishes he could have some other customers besides actors, because he's forgetting how to cut hair. One of Sully's best friends is Loney Haas, who runs Hammerstein's. Sully was complaining to Loney that he'd like a change of scene and Loney told him to move his shop onto the stage at Hammerstein's, which he did last week. Sully was right there before an appreciative audience with his razors, razors and razors, ably assisted by some of his old customers, the only Loney, Conroy and Lemaire, Eva Tanguay, Tommy Gray, Buster Keaton, et al.

GEORGE—Say, what's the idea of walking in and out of this establishment? Trying to kid the barbers?

SULLY—Not today. I'm the barbers on the bum.

HARRY—Listen! Don't come so near me. There are in this life only two chairs I fear. Only two—this barber chair of yours and the electric chair. Now you know all.

Synopsis of previous Chapters.

THE New York police are mystified by a series of murders of prominent men. The principle clue to the murderer the warning letter which is sent the victim signed with a "clutching hand." The first victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Kennedy discovers that a masked man has been in Elaine's bedroom and by drugging the "night sleep" has forced her to write a letter saying that his services are no longer required.

Involuntarily [illegible] drew back. Smartly in front of us a man [illegible] suddenly raised a revolver and levelled it [illegible]

"Don't!" cried a familiar voice. "That is Mr. [illegible]"

Kennedy turned to her, apparently not half so much concerned about the automatic that yawned at him as about the anxiety of the pretty girl who had intervened. The too eager plainclothesman lowered the gun sheepishly.

Sturtevant Martin was a typical society business man, quietly but richly dressed. He was inclined to be pompous and affected a pair of rather distinguished looking side whiskers.

In the excitement I glanced about hurriedly. There were two or three policemen in the shop [illegible] plainclothesmen, some armed with [illegible] looking sawed-off shot guns [illegible] in front of me was a sign, [illegible] on a pillar, which read: "This store will be closed at noon to-day. Martin & Co."

All the customers were gone. In fact, the clerks had had some trouble in clearing the shop, as many of them expressed not only surprise but considerable at the proceedings. Nevertheless the clerks had politely but resolutely ushered them out.

Martin himself was evidently very nervous and very much alarmed. Indeed, no one could blame him for that. Merely to have been singled out by the amazing master criminal was enough to cause panic. Already he had engaged detectives, prepared for whatever [illegible] and they had advised him to leave the diamonds in the counter, clear the store and let the crooks try anything, if they dared.

[illegible] was somewhat exasperated [illegible] presence, too, but could see that her explanation of Elaine's and Perry [illegible] it in the Clutching Hand had [illegible] him. He had been talk[illegible] as we came in and evidently [illegible] for the young lawyer

Just back of us, and around the corner, as we came in, we had noticed a limousine which had driven up. Three faultlessly attired [illegible] had entered a doorway down the street, as we learned afterward apparently going to a fashionable tailor's which occupied the second floor of the old-fashioned building, the first floor having been [illegible] Inside [illegible] [illegible], that one [illegible], who was [illegible] mentatiously [illegible]

Kennedy quietly examined the showcase which was, indeed, a veritable treasure store of brilliants. Then [illegible] looked over the police and detectives gathered around. There was nothing to do now but wait, as the [illegible] had.

I looked at a large antique grandfather's clock which was standing near by. It now lacked scarcely a minute of twelve.

Slowly the hands of the clock came nearer together at noon.

We all gathered about the showcase, with its glittering hoard of wealth, forming a circle at a respectful distance.

Martin pointed nervously at the clock.

In deep-lunged tones the clock played [illegible] chords written, I believe, by Handel. Then [illegible] organ stopped.

Martin finished counting [illegible]

"Well, it is still there!" exclaimed Martin [illegible]

GOOD ADVICE BY BLANCHE BATES

Cyril Maude Was Amazed at Her Speech to Graduates of Dramatic School.

It was at the graduation exercises of the fourteenth class of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, in the Empire Theatre, New York, and Miss Blanche Bates, who is to be seen here as one of Mr. Charles Frohman's three stars in his revival of "Diplomacy," with William Gillette and Miss Marie Doro, had just left the stage amid much hearty applause after a speech of encouragement to the boy and girl graduates. The applause subsided and Cyril Maude, his face aglow, turned to his neighbor. "That is the most wonderful speech I ever heard in my life!" he declared.

This is indeed praise, and it is worth while to record here perhaps a few of the sentiments in Miss Bates' talk which called it forth.

"You are starting much ahead of me of us who entered upon our work before the days of good dramatic instructors and tutors," she said, after intimately recalling her struggles several years ago in San Francisco when she was of a group of aspirants consisting of Maude Adams, Minnie Dupree, Katherine Grey and Holbrook Blinn.

KNOW YOU CAN ACT.

"You have tested yourselves. We got there as best we could, without any direction, without anyone saying, 'Well, develop this side of you, develop that, or do this or do that.' I believe in stock companies. With the way things are now, you can go boldly to the stock manager and say: 'I want an engagement.' Then you can find out what you can do. Mr. Belasco does not believe in stock companies. That is because he can find out what you can do better than you can yourself. He has a sort of sixth sense that tells him this. His belief impels you and you do it. Everybody stands up and says: 'How wonderful!' I never thought you had it in you.' If you had had stock training you would have known that you could do it. It gives you the spirit, the experience, the courage, the belief in yourself. If you attain success it is due to your belief in yourself.

DIFFERENT WITH WOMEN.

"Speaking to a very prominent manager the other day, I asked why it was that there were so few American boys on the stage, why so many importations? He did not say, 'We are putting on the type of play that requires such an actor,' but the fact of the matter seemed to be that the Englishman always wears his dinner clothes well.

"Now, boys, all you have to do is to get your dinner clothes and put them on evening, noon and night, go into the office of the managers, show them you are wearing your dinner coat, and get a job.

"We women start in with something else. We are more flexible; we are more easily handled. We act from the time our short clothes are out on it, and you know it, every one of you."

Kelly Tells How He Makes 'Em Laugh

Lew Kelly, who is with the Behman show, which comes to the Gaiety Theatre tomorrow, was the centre of an interested group of newspaper boys the other night when some one came up on the question: "What Makes People Laugh."

"Why," said Kelly, "you tickle 'em. You can never make people laugh unless you tickle 'em. When I first started on the stage I discovered that the only way to make an audience laugh was to slip up on them unawares and hand them something they didn't expect. You can get the real laugh from the audience by giving them the obvious joke. In comedy you want people to laugh with you, and not at you, and you want them to laugh because they can't help it.

"Why have I succeeded? Well, I think chiefly because I have always made it a point to burlesque human foibles which are apparent to people in front of the stage. The best kind of stage comedy is that particular kind which points out the ridiculous and possibly exaggerates the ordinary things of every day life, which you have many times laughed yourself. You can't manufacture a laugh. It must be the situation, the lines, and above all, in the delivery of the lines.

Royalty Still Likes 'Ben Hur'

The veneration of royalty is not an American trait, this fact has brought down on our democratic heads much adverse criticism from the faithful of other shores. An amusing evidence of this self prejudice was given recently during the long run of "Ben Hur" at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, London.

During this revival King George, Queen Mary and the Prince of Wales took a lively interest in the production. The young Prince, like his father and mother, was particularly curious about the modus operandi of the chariot race. Attended by his gentleman-in-waiting this Prince visited the busy hive back of the curtain while the preparations were being made for the race.

E. G. Cooke, who had been business manager for Ben Hur from the time it was first produced, is a level-headed Yankee with a soothing style and ear to the ground for anything that may be of help to his enterprise. Cooke told that young Prince was back of the curtain he informed an usher that His Royal and Highness had to leave once the chariots in the race scene. The news, of course, spread like a prairie fire.

When Mr. Cooke heard the commotion this feat had caused he rushed to the stage manager, Phil Boyd, and induced him to leave one of the chariot-drivers wear a mask for this performance.

When the great audience had assimilated the surprising news and saw the masked driver it rose and cheered until the theatre echoed like the cannonading of battle.

Bernice Fisher to Sing Star in the Temple Course

BERNICE FISHER AND JESKA SWARTZ

Well-known opera singers as they appeared in "Hansel and Gretel"

"13" PLAYS PART IN "SEVEN KEYS"

Thirteen in Cast and Miss Atwood Insists on Shoes with Thirteen Buttons.

It is singular that the cast of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" numbers exactly thirteen acting roles, and Lorena Atwood, who plays an important part at the Tremont, has a fad for shoes with exactly thirteen buttons.

It is the history of the world that every person of importance has had a hobby.

Louis XI. invariably wore an old hat, too disgraceful even for a modern hobo. Napoleon insisted on a forelock—but why enumerate when the point to be reached is that Miss Lorena Atwood's hobby is buttons.

Therefore, the conclusion to arrive at is that Miss Atwood, like George M. Cohan, is not superstitious, and if she is not, Cohan who is the author of the play in which she is now appearing at the Tremont.

In the matter of gloves Miss Atwood has them five buttons long, to make no less—five buttons, precisely. And if it is a waist that she buys and it has not thirteen buttons down the back, she will have additional buttonholes made and buttons sewed on to make up her favorite number.

In order that there shall be exactly thirteen buttons on her shoes, Miss Atwood is forced to have them made to order. And it would sound possibly quite important if it were said that Miss Atwood has a special craftsman in New York to model and make her shoes. But she has nothing of the kind. She goes into any store where good shoes are made and gives her order, insisting only that the number of buttons shall be thirteen.

Irvin Cobb to Talk for Red Cross Fund

Irvin S. Cobb will repeat the illustrated talk which he gave last Thursday in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, on some recent experiences in the war zone, for the benefit of its European war relief fund of the American Red Cross at Tremont Temple, on Saturday afternoon and evening, January 16. At the outbreak of the European war, Mr. Cobb was at the front as a correspondent. Selwyn & Company will present Mr. Cobb in all the large cities of the country, and he will deliver his so-called "talk" in connection with a series of moving pictures of actual scenes at the front.

AT LACONIA, N. H.

Because of the generous policy of Manager Charles H. Waldron at his Colonial Theatre at Laconia, N. H., the play-loving people of that city and vicinity have been given opportunities to see the very best theatrical attractions of the drama, musical and vaudeville kind that could be enjoyed only by visits to some large city and at high prices for seats. Mr. Waldron now announces the engagement of "Peg O' My Heart," beginning January 21, with a strong company.

Boston to Hear Opera Favorite for the First Time Since Her Marriage.

Mrs. Bernice Fisher Butler, who retired from the Boston Opera Company to marry Morgan Butler, son of the big New Bedford mill owner, and whose beautiful voice has not been heard in Boston for two years, has consented to reappear for one performance only with her old companion in opera, Jeska Swartz-Morse.

Miss Fisher and Mrs. Morse are both dignified society matrons, but they have forgotten their frolics in the children's roles of Hans and Grethel, and they are looking forward to the reunion which occurs at the next Tremont Temple opera concert on January 25, when they appear with Ellen Keller, the violinist, and the Lotus Male Quartet.

Bernice Fisher came from a church choir in Evanston, Illinois, and joined the Boston Opera Company its first season. She began in minor parts, but her voice was so beautiful and her personality so attractive that she rapidly advanced until she was singing stellar roles. She appeared as Michaela in "Carmen," succeeding Alice Nielsen in that part. She created the role of Gretel, and the part of Red Riding Hood in "The Blue Forest." She also created in America the part of the boy in "Pelleas and Melisande." She sang Mimi in "Bohemia" with great success, Marguerite in "Faust," and did other important parts.

Her marriage to Mr. Butler was a great surprise to music lovers, but it was the culmination of a romance which began in their school days. At the very pinnacle of her career she retired from the stage. She declares that she is very happy and will never regret the grand opera, but she loves singing and may from time to time appear in concert.

'Midnight Girls' to Jump 2,000 Miles

When "The Midnight Girl" finishes its Boston engagement, it will start on one of the longest railroad jumps on record, a 2,000 mile junket to Denver. From the Shubert Theatre to San Francisco is the route booked for this big musical comedy, which has been selected by the shuberts as their contribution to the gayety of the San Francisco Panama Exposition which opens late in February.

The journey to Denver will take three days and three nights, and will cost something like $12,000 for railroad fares alone. There are nearly 100 people in the company, headed by George MacFarlane.

MANY NATIONS IN SUZI COMPANY

The personnel of the members of the Suzi company is interesting, and while there is a war of nations on in Europe, and practically every nation is represented in Lew Fields' big organization, the casualties have as yet resulted, but the theatrical family abides in amity. Several of the principals are English; one is German, another French, still another Austrian. There is no Russian and no Belgian, nor is Servia or Turkey represented.

Miss Jose Collins, the star, is England, and so is Connie Ediss, Connie Naughton, Robert Evett and Gilbert Clayton. Fritzi von Busing is German, as her name indicates, and Melville Stewart is of English birth, but naturalized long ago as an American. Arthur Bipson is French, Juan Villasana is Austrian, while among the lesser principals and chorus half of belligerent Europe has its representative.

The war made it possible for Mr. Fields, by a free use of the cable, to gather for this one company some of the best-known English performers. Miss Collins, although now recognized as an American star, was under contract for the Savoy Theatre, London, for a production this Fall, which was called off because of the war, and the same was true of William McNaughton, booked for Alhambra. Connie Ediss, under engagement for the Hippodrome, and Robert Evett, who had a tenor role for George Edwardes, at the Gaiety.

All of these principals enjoy splendid reputations in England, although each has been seen in American productions.

Jose Collins, the youngest of prima donna stars, is a daughter of the late Lottie Collins, the famous music hall artist and creator of the still-remembered song "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-aye." She has been a featured member of the Winter Garden and Ziegfeld "Follies" companies.

Tom McNaughton, the highest-priced pantomimist in England, has been seen here as leading comedian with Christie MacDonald in "The Spring Maid," and "Sweethearts," while Connie Ediss established herself in America as a comedienne with Lew Fields in "The Girl Behind the Counter."

PLAYS THAT REMAIN IN TOWN

Hollis Theatre.

William Gillette, Blanche Bates and Marie Doro are attracting overflowing audiences with Sardou's comedy, "Diplomacy," at the Hollis street Theatre, where the engagement of this noteworthy trio of fine artists has proved the event of the dramatic season. "Diplomacy" has never had more worthy interpretation in Boston and is a necessar better acted.

Colonial Theatre.

The end has come for the liveliest musical comedy success of the season at the Colonial Theatre, and only one week more remains for the engagement of "The Girl from Utah" in this city. There is no question about the popularity this musical show has manifested for this lively musical comedy, and the popularity in New York has been duplicated in every respect hereabouts. Charles Frohman placed his three most popular stars in this merry comedy in this one work, and the result has been a combination that has delighted all.

Plymouth Theatre.

Lloyd Maude, the brilliant English actor, has one desire and that is to impress upon those who have not yet witnessed him in "Grumpy" that the play contains enough of good, despite the fact that it was from him he took to call it a melodrama. One or the other, however, the piece is well worth seeing and is enjoying enormous popularity.

Tremont Theatre.

It is doubtful if many of those who have witnessed a performance of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" at the Tremont realize that a great deal of the success of the play is due to the acting. Will B. Hodge, the young author, is being congratulated on all sides.

Wilbur Theatre.

It is a long time since any farce scored such a decided hit in Boston as the one at present at the Wilbur, "Seven Keys to Baldpate" is a play of American business and domestic life, which has been testing the capacity of the Wilbur Theatre for the past week or more.

Shubert Theatre.

"The Midnight Girl" will enter upon the second and last week of its stay in the Shubert Theatre on Monday afternoon, when it starts on its transcontinental tour to the Pacific coast. The company comes to see and hear George MacFarlane and Miss Margaret Romaine.

Cort Theatre.

"Peg O' My Heart" begins the last week of its engagement at the Cort Theatre tomorrow night. While there is no abatement of interest in this delightful comedy it is announced by the management that bookings in other cities compels its withdrawal from Boston.

BETA KAPPA PHI DANCE.

The Beta Kappa Phi Club connected with Boston College is to hold its annual dancing party at Riverdale Casino, Brookline, on Friday evening, January 29.

ROMEO BY THE JEWETT PLAYERS

Miss Burkett and Mr. Ralph Will Assume the Leading Roles.

On the stage of the Boston Opera House, which has so often been the scene of the opera Gounod composed around "Romeo and Juliet," the drama itself will be disclosed during the forthcoming week. The tragedy of the Veronese lovers will be presented by the Henry Jewett Players.

The title parts will be assumed by Miss Burkett and Mr. Ralph, who so thoroughly proved the romantic temper of their acting by their interpretations of Rosalind and Orlando. Miss Viola Compton, whose abilities as a comedienne were revealed in her Audrey, in "As You Like It," will take the role of the Nurse. Mr. Mudie, who gave so commendable a performance of Adam last week, will be the Mercutio; Mr. Conroy will take the part of Tybalt; Mr. Tonge will be the Friar, and Mr. Montesole will appear as Peter.

A certain curious interest will attach to the production, at least on the part of frequenters of the Opera House, since it will be the first presentation of the Shakespeare tragedy as a drama on that theatre's stage. The last occasion of its performance in its musical dress was a memorable Monday night last March, when Miss Marlowe and Mr. Muratore appeared as the Juliet and the Romeo in the first two acts of the Gounod opera.

The same careful attention to detail, and regard for the fitness of things that marked the "As You Like It" will be exercised in the forthcoming production; and it is promised that the Romeo and Juliet" within memory has been clothed in such fitting scenic mountings and such opulent costumes as those that will be disclosed at the Opera House on Monday night.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be followed by "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

SHOWS COMING TO BOSTON PLAYHOUSES.

Majestic Theatre.

Lew Fields offers his latest musical play at the Majestic Theatre tomorrow night for a three weeks' engagement when he brings here from the Casino and Shubert Theatres, New York, Miss Jose Collins, Mr. Tom McNaughton and their big supporting company in the musical play "Suzi." "Suzi" is an adaptation from the German by Otto Hauerbach, author of "Three Twins," "Madame Sherry," "The Only Girl" and "High Jinks," and has met with great success. In starring Miss Collins, Mr. Fields was according the star the best of opportunities for the exhibition of her work on the opening at the Casino, and she thus had the distinction of being the youngest prima donna star on the American stage. Particularly fortunate has Mr. Fields been in obtaining the services of Tom McNaughton as the leading comedian. Mr. McNaughton will be remembered in Boston as Miss Carrie MacDonald in both "The Spring Maid" and in "Sweethearts." Miss Connie Ediss, another big American success was attained with Mr. Fields in "The Girl Behind the Counter," the leading role of Suzi's stage mother. Lew Ahearn, the young American actor who gained distinction as the comic Dromedario, is also in the cast, as is Robert Evett, tenor of the Gilbert and Sullivan revivals at the Savoy, London, and with the George Edwardes' musical plays at the Gaiety, and Fritzi von Busing, prima donna contralto in "The Doll," "Rosalie Soldier" and "The Merry Countess"; Melville Stewart, the original London creator of the Sheltering Palm song in "Florodora"; Arthur Lipson, last seen here in "The June Bride."

"Suzi" is in three acts, laid in Buda Pest, Hungary, and Sorrento, Italy, and is replete with catchy numbers, many of which already have become popular in musical and dancing circles.

B. F. Keith's.

Emma Carus, late star of "A Broadway Honeymoon," Hughie Jennings, the mighty manager of the Detroit baseball team, and Ethel Green and Llaire Dorres and her Imperial Opera Company in "Scenes from Grand Opera," are the headliners at B. F. Keith's next week. Miss Carus, jolliest and lightest of all vaudeville comic stars, will appear in a new melange of mirth, song and dance, assisted by the dancing demon, Carl Randall. Hughie Jennings, the manager of the "Tigers," is the greatest drawing card in baseball vaudeville. He appears in company with Ben Smith, the well-known black face comedian, in a sketch written especially for him by John C. Peebles and entitled "The New Manager." Jennings will sing, do a monologue, utter the famous "Sez he" and "Sez she" and do does on the diamond. "Scenes from Grand Opera" is a genuine novelty in the way of artists presenting gems from "Carmen," "Il Trovatore," "Rigoletto" and "La Boheme." Llaire Dorres and Ethel Green, as Mimi Trovatore, Rustleana." Alan Brooks has a very funny sketch called "Dolly Connolly Comedy Co." Dolly Connolly and Percy Wenrich, the author of hundreds of song hits, will sing Mr. Wenrich's very latest compositions, and other features will include Willett and Bunnell, LaVar and Rogers in specialty and novelty society dances.

Casino.

"The Honeymoon Girls" Burlesquers who will provide the entertainment at Charles H. Waldron's Casino, beginning with the Monday matinee, has the reputation for giving a high class performance. Everything in the line of new burlesques, in stage equipment, costumes, stage accessories and in up-to-date vaudeville will be presented. Phil Ott of Chelsea, headliner for a long time in vaudeville and a star until recently in musical comedy, is the principal comedian. The chorus is large and sprightly, the women being prepossessing and always keyed up to gingery action.

Boston Theatre.

Popular prices will govern the staging of Shaw & Erlanger's World's Fair production of "Ben-Hur" at the Boston Theatre next Tuesday evening, when a brief season will be inaugurated. Considering that more than 600 people appear in the ensemble scenes and that twenty horses, driven in five quadruple teams, furnish the thriller in the chariot race in the arena at the Antioch circus, the public are positively getting value received for the money invested to witness this tremendous production, the stupendousness of which is best demonstrated by the fact that the Boston Theatre management deem it necessary to have the playhouse tomorrow evening in order to drill the large staff of musicians and electricians scheduled to handle the workings of the production. In order to insure a perfect performance on Tuesday night.

Although seen many times in Boston the interest being manifested in the engagement almost gives one the impression that it was the first time the play was to be seen here. Arranged, it is a marvel of twentieth century staggerdom. Such massing of colors, grouping of crowds, and exquisite light effects have never been seen in one entertainment. Some of the scenes could furnish material for a whole season's show, and that most of evening character. All is reverently shown, and not the slightest offense is given to any one's religious belief. The production is magnificent in every detail, and singularly, also those who never go to church are deeply interested in "Ben-Hur" as those who see in this presentation the power and the mercy of the Saviour.

Amongst the members of the splendid company assembled to present "Ben-Hur" are Richard Bishop, who has played in the title role; Mabel M. Sherwin, Leslie Stowe, George Stanley, Camilles M. Quimby, Herbert De Guerre, Charles Candida, Jack Hagan, Cecil Sully, Virginia Howell, Mary Dupree, Alice Haynes, Maud Beam Stover and Martha Bouchet.

It is well to bear in mind that the curtain rises on the evening performances of "Ben-Hur" promptly at 8 o'clock on the matinees

Gaiety Theatre.

No more auspicious attraction could be desired by the management of the Gaiety Theatre than Lew Kelly, in the edition de luxe of the irrepressible "Behman show." By the uniqueness and originality of his fun methods, this comedian has established himself as one of the most popular and most prosperous stars in burlesque. His creation of the "Dope" is conceded to be a comedy classic. Other players have portrayed the same role of the drug victim, but it remained for Mr. Kelly to create an impersonation in a humorous line.

The development of the Kelly prestige has in no small way been due to the managerial acumen of Mr. Paul Singer, to whom the field of burlesque production is an open book. This manager appreciates the value of clever principals, the importance of securing the proper balance between musical dialogue and ensemble, and in the observance of production detail he has no peer. Mr. Singer brings new faces this season, but also includes such sterling old favorites as Lon Hascall, the eccentric character lead, and Ameta Fryer, the clever soubrette. As ever, Mr. Martelle, a clever impersonator, Jean Irwin, the new prima donna, a recruit from vaudeville, will prove a valued addition to the "Singer" forces. With the thread of sequence of last year's presentment remains, there has been added so much new fun material with so complete a change in the music and song numbers, that the offering can be styled "new" all through.

Hubbard Opera Talks.

The second Hubbard Opera Talk in the public series Havrah Hubbard, assisted by Floyd, pianist, is giving in Steinert Hall, will take place next Tuesday evening, at 8:15 o'clock. Fevrier's setting of the grand Masterlinck drama "Monno-Vanna" will be the subject.

St. James Theatre.

One of the notable features coming to this theatre Monday is Harold Crane and company in the sensational dramatic playlet entitled "Justice." Another feature will be that popular young comedian, H. Kelly Ferrell, better known as the president of the Hobo Union, who will offer his up-to-date monologue, also assisting the same and Miss Ferrell. Bell and Hall will offer a repertoire of songs, also impersonations of famous stars of the day. Many other features are to be presented, together with the first photo of Blaine, featuring Arnold Daly and Miss Peggy Wood in the third episode, "The Vanishing Jewels."

Globe Theatre.

The big feature bill for the week beginning tomorrow afternoon will be Weston & Clyde in the new surprise novelty entitled "Attorneys," which promises to be something new and decidedly different. Another feature will be Miss Maude L. Maitland, who will present a repertoire of up-to-date songs in her own individual manner. The Talbot Bros. who have been in one entertainment or another for years, will offer their conception of real juggling and thrilling gymnastic feats. An added attraction for Monday afternoon and Wednesday will be the third episode of the "Exploits of Elaine" featuring Arnold Daly and Miss Peggy Wood.

Orpheum Theatre.

Next week's program of the Orpheum Theatre presents many features of unusual interest. The bill for the first half of the week will include Wood and Hay Stage Struck Pair, Ethel Green and Llaire Dorres and Company, Hughie Jennings, Manly Hardy, world's champion cornet soloist, assisted by Rose Dubrow in a musical novelty, Alice Haynes and Maud Beam Stover and Martha Bouchet.

Howard Athenaeum.

"Habit," Maranville, the star shortstop of the Boston Braves as assisted by Rabbit Maranville, will return engagement at the Howard this week. Mr. Maranville will have something to say about his career as a ball player, and will also present interesting stories in connection with the subservience of the diamond. The following week Mr. Maranville will be furnished by Phil Ott, Chelsea, Alice Haynes Maud Beam Stover and Martha Bouchet.

He is well to bear in mind that the curtain rises on the evening performances of "Ben-Hur" promptly at 8 o'clock on the matinees

ADD TO BILL AT THE TOY THEATRE

Chinese Fantasy and a Modern Spanish Romance on This Week's Bill.

The much-discussed European peace-war play, "Across the Border," remains at the Toy Theatre next week, with the same excellent cast, and with two new pieces on the bill in "The Willow Pattern Plate," a delightful Chinese fantasy, and "A Morning of Sunshine," a modern Spanish romance, with Mrs. Lucretia Xavier Floyd and Robert G. Sinclair as the stars.

Mrs. Floyd has made a special translation for the Toy, and she plays the leading part of the Duenna. This play has been done in Boston in Spanish, but never before in English.

"The Willow Pattern Plate" is an old Chinese legend, told in pantomime and in the Chinese manner. The Museum of Fine Arts has assisted in supplying accurate and gorgeous costumes, true to the land of the thousand gods. DRAMA AND AMUSEMENTS

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

One of the most misleading adages ever put into circulation was the remark of Maclyn Arbuckle that nobody loves a fat man. Statistics show that more fat men have been loved than thin men, and their wives have loved them longer. And if you have any doubt upon the subject the attitude of the women in the audience at "A Pair of Sixes" will settle. There is Frank MacIntyre, who must weigh pretty close to three hundred, and Fritz Williams, who preserves his youthful figure, who is the mirror of fashion and the glass of form.

Yet, mark you, yet is in the fat man who wins the love of the girl. Even when she sees him wallowing around in the garb of a butler with mutton chop side whiskers and pearly tears of despair rolling down his chubby cheeks she does not turn from him and espouse the slry and suave Williams. No, she puts her arms around Frank's fat neck and distributes kisses impartially all over his ample countenance.

That's in the play, you may say. In real life she might not speak to MacIntyre. Possibly, but what I want to call your attention to is that no dramatic logic is fractured by the situation. All the women in the audience are in hearty sympathy with her. They would like to climb up and sprawl over MacIntyre also. They think it is perfectly all right and proper that a girl should love a young man who weighs as much as the ton of coal some of the dealers sell to the poor people.

The night "A Pair of Sixes" opened I was witnessing a Shakespearian production, so I didn't have a chance to comment upon it. In fact, it is a very funny farce comedy. Rarely has a company visited Boston with a more thoroughly competent company. It is a combination of the companies which played New York and Chicago, and while it is possible that the original cast may have secured more laughter than these people do, I doubt it very much. MacIntyre is one of those happy people who do not have to try to be funny. Fritz Williams is as smooth as ever. Sam Hardy, the other quarrelsome business man, would be equally effective if he were more careful with his diction. He talks too fast and you can't always understand him. Maude Eburne, as a grotesque parlor maid, succeeds in being funny where actresses in such parts are usually just repulsive.

"You remember Corse Payton and his famous curtain speech. 'Here you are, ladies and gentlemen, the greatest bargain in the world, a company of thirty actors for thirty cents, a cent an actor, ladies and gentlemen.' Well, I've got 400 actors and we're playing at a dollar—four actors for a cent, ladies and gentlemen. I've got Payton beat a mile."

Mr. Cook also mentioned that he has a lot of new scenery, new chariots, new horses, the others died of old age, and lots of new principals.

"And when it comes to spectacles," he added, "we're the only rival the movies have got. They have to go some in the movies to beat our chariot race, our Roman trireme, our shipwreck at sea, and our pageant. Why, D'Annundo, the celebrated writer, when he wrote 'Cabiria' couldn't get any spectacles without pinching our stuff.

"And if it wasn't for us, lots of people would never go to the theatre at all. Why, there are millions of folks in this country that have never seen any show but 'Ben Hur,' and have seen that five or six times."

Mr. Cook's oration was interrupted by the entrance of rival press agents, so prondsing further facts another time, he went away from here.

The Boston will be dark tomorrow night while the stupendous machinery of "Ben Hur" is being installed, but the first performance will take place Tuesday night. Come early and see the Star of Bethlehem.

"Ben Hur" was first produced in 1899 and has been continuously on the boards for sixteen years. Stagecraft has advanced with tremendous strides since then, but the big chariot race in which twenty horses are driven in five quadruple teams is still one of the most thrilling scenes there is to be witnessed in a theatre.

One of the props required by Hughie Jennings for his engagement at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week is a large grass mat. And therein lies a tale. Every baseball fan has seen the manager of the Detroit Tigers pull grass on the coaching lines as he utters his famous war-cry of "E-Yah!" After Hughie Jennings and his vaudeville partner, Ben Smith, have played their novel baseball skit, "The New Mascot," Hughie invariably gives a slight idea of his famous coaching methods, the familiar Jennings whistle and his equally familiar cry, "E-Yah!" Then he drops on his knees on the mat and pulls grass with all his old-time vigor. The grass mats used in the Jennings and Smith act come under the head of perishable props, for he destroys an average of one every two days by pulling out all the grass embedded in the mat.

Probably no prima donna now before the American public has had a more rapid rise than pretty Jose Collins, the star of Lew Fields' elaborate production of the musical play from the Hungarian, "Suzi." Only twenty-six years old, she came to this country less than four years ago, with nothing in her favor above other girls, save that she was the daughter of the famous English music hall singer, Lottie Collins. She had been given a hearing in vaudeville in London because she was her mother's daughter, and the Messrs. Shubert, hearing of her, brought her to this country, and gave her a small singing part in a Winter Garden production in New York. Her success was instantaneous, and she was soon a featured member of the company, and later was engaged by F. Ziegfeld as prima donna of his "Follies." But it remained for Lew Fields to make of the girl a genuine star, and it all came about in a somewhat abrupt but none the less role of Suzi, and as such the billboards and newspaper advertisements read, "Lew Fields presents 'Suzi,' with Jose Collins, Tom McNaughton, Connie Ediss," and the balance of the cast, and so the signs read, and the electric lights in front of the Casino, in New York, until after the first performance. That was all Miss Collins was entitled to, and all she expected, but Mr. Fields was so impressed with the performance she gave at the New York premiere that the next morning he ordered the electric sign in front of the Casino to read, "Lew Fields presents Jose Collins in 'Suzi,'" etc. The first intimation the prima donna had of this elevation to stardom was when she reached the theatre that night, and saw the big electric lights. She was so overcome with joy and pride that her self-control left her, and she hid her head against the cushions of her taxicab, and had a good, old-fashioned cry.

One of the humorous features of the past week were the assaults on William Gillette by some of the critics for taking a few liberties with Sardou in "Diplomacy" and fixing up the dialogue so that it would make American audiences of the year 1915 laugh. And when you remember that these are hard times, that most of the big industrials have cut their dividends and that lots of folk are out of work, and two dollars looms up like a German 42-centimetre gun, it is considerable of an accomplishment to make us laugh.

Sardou, to begin with, was neither Racine, Moliere or Shakespeare. He was a sort of French Clyde Fitch. He was a very satisfactory right for any star. Sarah Bernhardt recommended him highly. Few men have to put in shape for the English stage, I don't know of any reason why William Gillette shouldn't have slipped in a few gags. And if he fattened up his own part a bit, what actor wouldn't if he had an opportunity. "Diplomacy," as it is presented at the Hollis Street, with Gillette, Blanche Bates and Marie Doro, is a very interesting and amusing entertainment.

"Common Clay," the latest Harvard prize play, seems to have caught on at the Castle Square like its predecessors of other years. The younger the dramatist, the bigger the subject he attacks as a rule, and Mr. Kinkead is no exception to the rule. In justice to him, it must be said that he handles his problem skillfully, and has evolved a sensational play. The Craig company always works very hard on these Harvard plays, and everybody in the cast from Mary Young and John Craig through the list does his or her very best. The enthusiasm and freshness of Miss Young, despite her long years of service in stock, is always a cause for admiration.

That peculiar but profitable arm of the theatrical business known as burlesque is putting its best foot forward this week, and Lew Kelly and the Behman show is on view at the Gaiety. This particular company is a remarkably good one, and is famed all over the circuit as a whale of a show. Scenery, costumes, girls and comedians are high class, and many a two dollar show furnishes less entertainment than this popular priced attraction.

Coming Events.

On Monday evening, January 18, Hazel Dawn will make her first appearance in Boston at the Colonial Theatre as a star in her own right in "The Debutante," a new operetta, for which Harry B. Smith has written the book, Robert B. Smith provided the lyrics and Victor Herbert composed the music. Ever since the success of the new star in "The Pink Lady" a few seasons ago it has been forecasted that Hazel Dawn would make a bid for stellar honors, and this prophecy is now being fulfilled apparently in a very happy manner.

With Emma Trentini for a star and Clifton Crawford, also a star in his own right, and a long cast of operatic and musical celebrities, it is certain that the performance of the new operetta, "The Peasant Girl," which the Shuberts will offer at the Shubert Theatre beginning Monday, January 18, will prove to be a dazzling theatrical occasion.

In addition to the players and singers of distinction who are numbered in the company, the producers have also secured the foremost composer of light opera in the country today to contribute to the score. Rudolf Friml, author of "The Firefly" and "High Jinks" music, has outshone himself in this latest work. Harry Benrimo is the stage producer, and Jack Mason of the Winter Garden forces was chosen to direct the dancing.

John Cort has completed the cast for his new musical farce, "What's Going On," which will be seen later in the season at the Cort Theatre in Boston.

Ben-Hur Is NOT a Motion Picture

The management wishes to particularly impress upon its patrons that the production of "Ben-Hur" is not a moving picture, but the acted stage version of General Lew Wallace's mighty drama.

Ben-Hur Is NOT a Motion Picture

BEN HUR

400 People on the Stage — 20 Horses Driven in Five Quadruple Teams Compete in the Thrilling Chariot Race

PREPARATIONS for the new and elaborate World's Fair production of "Ben-Hur" are on a scale of such magnitude that even with the spacious stage of the Boston Theatre the management deems it necessary to close the theatre tomorrow night for a thorough scenic and light rehearsal of the entire spectacle to familiarize the vast army of stage mechanics employed to handle the workings.

NEVER before in the history of the stage has there been so much wealth expended on the presentation of a historical spectacle. Flashing jewels, dazzling armor, magnificent robes, the marvelous rugs of the Far East, and the costly furnishings of 2,000 years ago are all combined and displayed in the wonderful revival made solely in the interest of the Panama-Pacific World's Fair at San Francisco this year.

In the World of Motion Pictures

By HARLOW HARE.

One of the greatest illusions of the motion picture business is the idea that anybody can open a picture theatre and get rich. It has brought into the business a great many incompetents who have contributed idiotic and unfair competition and who are the cause of the decline in the profits of the motion picture theatre.

The average neighborhood can support one picture house comfortably, and it would seem the obvious thing for the would-be exhibitor to find another neighborhood which is unserved, but that is just what does not happen.

Let a theatre be fairly prosperous in a suburban district, and another theatre is very soon opened across the street. Then these two houses divide the business, neither makes enough profit to give a decent show and finally one or both of the theatres pass out.

In the days when the picture was still a novelty an enterprising person might hire a vacant store, rent a few films, open his doors and collect the dimes from the persons who passed up and down the street. As the business was entirely "drop in," there was no necessity for advertising and there are a number of picture house proprietors still hanging on today who do not believe that advertising will help them.

COMFORT FIRST.

The day of the vacant store as a picture theatre is gone, and the day of the small theatre with tiny chairs so close together that a fat man or woman crowds neighbors at the right and left is rapidly disappearing. Comfort for the patrons is now almost a necessity, and so is good, clean air. There are still in Boston picture houses where a damp, musty smell greets the visitors, but the patrons are rapidly deserting such places in favor of fine houses like the Park, Modern, Franklin Park and Bijou, and the splendid houses operated by Marcus Loew.

Another interesting feature of the business is the development of a class of patrons who want to see a long picture, rather than a lot of disconnected sketches. These people search the newspapers until they find the announcements of what they want. The public has also learned to demand good acting and good mountings and no longer walks confidently into a theatre the program of which is not announced.

The little picture houses are caught between the millstones of more intelligent public demand, and the higher cost of what the public wants. The good pictures are more expensive than the old fashioned ones because they cost more to produce. The little theatres must increase their patronage or their prices or both, and they do not know what to do.

REMEDY IN ADS.

Of course the remedy will be found in advertising, in appealing to a wider population than which surrounds the theatre and which doesn't need to discover where it is from the newspapers. But many of the picture house owners are amateurs in the show business and do not know anything about advertising. They think it is a contribution to charity instead of an investment, and they make it grudgingly, and quit in a few days if they cannot show immediate results.

I know of a man who invested $75,000 in a picture theatre in a big city and then refused to invest more than $25 per week in newspaper advertising. The advertising appropriations of most picture exhibitors are absurdly small in proportion to their weekly budget for films, music, etc.

Nevertheless it is the remedy for the existing situation in the picture business and those who advertise intelligently will not find those who do not will inevitably be forced out of the business.

Film Folks.

A clever character actress is as important to a production as the very foundation of the studio itself. The time has passed when, with make up, wigs and puffed hose any one in stock is ready to play character, running the gauntlet from the slavey in the boarding house to the society woman who entertains the dukes and duchesses of royalty. Today actresses are chosen to type. Vera Lewis, who for years was one of the cleverest actresses on the stage, is now with Bosworth, Inc., and, playing with Elsie Janis, to her has been entrusted some very interesting and important roles. Miss Lewis is distinctively American, tall, slender, with a beautifully aquilined nose that spells a long line of aristocratic ancestors. In "Caprice of Kitty," the first release by Bosworth starring Elsie Janis, Miss Lewis is the Miss Smythe of Miss Smythe's Select Seminary, and had she stepped from the pages of a Theodore Dreiser novel not have been more true to type. In the second Miss Janis picture "Betty in Search of a Thrill," she is the aunt, to whose home comes Betty from out of the west. Miss Lewis is cleverly convincing in her acting, and radiates across the screen the charm of her own personality. She will be seen in future Bosworth, Inc. "Paramount Pictures."

Fritzi Scheff will appear in the Bosworth production of "Pretty Mrs. Smith," highly successful and which has just concluded its run at the Casino Theatre, New York, but four weeks ago. This will be the first time in the history of filmization that a play has been produced in pictures so shortly after leaving the important career on Broadway.

That "Pretty Mrs. Smith" was a triumph for the author of the play and Miss Scheff goes without saying, if one took cognizance of the business at the Casino Theatre and the excellent reviews which greeted the production by the severe metropolitan critics. Fritzi Scheff "Pretty Mrs. Smith" will be released on the Paramount program about the middle of March. It will probably require about eight weeks to produce the sort of a picture Bosworth contemplates with Bosworth's usual attention to detail.

* * *

Who has not been waiting for the Bosworth release of "Nearly a Lady?" featuring Elsie Janis? Well, the picture is now completed, according to reports from the Bosworth studio at Los Angeles, and in the Hubbell chain is being shown next week to Miss Janis, who is delaying her departure from the Coast in order to see the production run off, after which the talented star will immediately board a train for New York, and after barely hesitating a few moments in the metropolis will embark for London, where a production is being delayed for weeks in order to await Miss Janis, who will appear in the star role at the British capital.

* * *

George W. Lederer, the originator of musical revues in this country, and under whose management many of the most celebrated theatrical stars of the present day have appeared, including Lillian Russell, Edna May, Sam Bernard and Harold Warrold, and who produced "Madame Sherry," has entered the motion picture field, his company, the George Lederer Filmotions, has just finished a six-reel comedy, "The Fight," which was written by Rupert Hughes and followed his other great success, "Within The Law." Miss Margaret Wycherly, for whom Mr. Veiller wrote the play, is featured in Hobart Hall Winslow's screen adaptation of the drama in conjunction with John E. Kellerd, the noted Shakespearean actor.

* * *

Just to prove the falsity of the reports that he was killed in the Pendleton round-up a few weeks ago, Art Accord, the famous cowboy, is doing some daredevil stunts and reckless riding in the feature film now being produced by Herbert Bosworth, "The Message to Darcy Collins." The play, written by Charles E. Van Loan, opens with a reel of thrilling "Western" action, giving Accord plenty of opportunity to show what he can do on horseback, and those who know the range of this gifted young man's work, agree that "is going some."

Latest Releases.

The Bosworth, Inc. "Paramount Picture" will be released next Thursday, January 14, Maclyn Arbuckle in "It's No Laughing Matter."

The public is always grateful for a photoplay, delightfully new and rich in comedy. That is why they will welcome "It's No Laughing Matter" starring Maclyn Arbuckle—the comedian who makes you laugh—but there is an undercurrent of pathos in "It's No Laughing Matter" when dark shadows fall upon Maclyn Arbuckle, the Hi Judd postmaster, poet and philosopher of a small country village. Supporting Maclyn Arbuckle is an all-star cast, including Myrtle Stedman, Adele Farrington, Jack Standing and Charles Marriott. Lois Weber, who wrote "It's No Laughing Matter" for Maclyn Arbuckle, also directed it.

It is a comedy drama, a play, glowing with human interest and laughter the strong, yet tender character of Hi Judd, the village postmaster. Hi Judd has only one fault, according to his wife, he leaves the wood pile unfinished and the chores undone too often—just because he would rather write verses to relieve his lonely cronies. How Bess, his lively daughter, pinching her faith in her father's talent, interests the editor of one of these verses to a great newspaper which accepts the verses more and faster as he can write them and sends a check for the ones received just in time to pay off the mortgage on the little home—is but a bare skeleton of the entertaining story of "It's No Laughing Matter."

"Paramount Pictures" come heavily into the program for the week of the January 11 release. In this production "The Famous Players" Film Company present Florence Reed, another famous legitimate star to record her genius on the screen. She will make her initial bow in "The Dancing Girl" by Henry Arthur Jones.

The mobile face of this popular young American star, with its wonderful play of expression, lends itself readily to the screen, and her grace and beauty of form render Miss Reed particularly well-suited to the role of the Dancing Girl.

"The Dancing Girl" might have been written for the camera, so full of action and picturesqueness is every scene, the colorful exteriors of the rocky coast of "The Isle of Endellion" contrasting with the rich interiors of the elegant home of the profligate Duke of Guisberry, under whose patronage the dancing girl lives for a time, and there is the dramatic comparision of the sober life of the grave Quakers on the lonely island with the gay life of London society and the bright Bohemia of the singers and artists with whom the Quaker girl mingles when she becomes the dancer and the favorite of the Duke.

With commendable discretion, the Famous Players have entrusted the production in all the lavish fashion for which their subjects are justly famous. The situations in the play permit of many impressive and massive settings, and these opportunities have been taken advantage of to the fullest mechanical extent.

Florence Reed is supported by an exceptional company of Broadway favorites, including such distinguished players as Fuller Mellish, Malcolm Williams, Lorraine Huling, William Russell, Eugene Ormonde, William Lloyd and Minna Gale.

The supporting cast includes a large number of prominent screen artists. TRY YOUR HAND AT WRITING "MOVIE PLAY" AND WIN $25 PRIZE

Everybody is a potential playwright, and since the movies became so popular most everybody has thought of writing a play for the pictures, but has only been prevented because of lack of knowledge of the technical side of the business.

Now the most important part of the piece is the idea, and the Sunday AMERICAN contest is intended for people who are not professional writers, and therefore the award will be based upon the value of the idea. The best scenarios will be submitted to one of the great producing companies, and the prize winner will also be produced upon the screen by one of the big companies, which one will be announced later.

A scenario is a sketch play. It isn't the play itself, just the idea told in a few terse sentences with suggestions for the settings. The AMERICAN contest does not require that the scenario be complete. All that is necessary is that you have a bully idea for a one-reel picture. Don't attempt any long picture, please, and tell it in as few words as possible. Don't write more than 300 words. If you can't sketch your picture in that space it will be too involved to be worth much. Send it to the Motion Picture Contest Editor.

This Contest Will Close Saturday, January 23.

Actress in Movie Play Has Thrilling Experience in Icy Water.

"Elsie Janis drowned!" this was the exclamation of horror that came from the lips of the rest of the company, as they stood upon the banks of the river wherein the plucky little woman had plunged while making one of her first pictures, "Betty in Search of a Thrill," for Bosworth, Inc.

Fortunately Miss Janis overcame the conditions which threatened for some moments to send her to her doom. In this scenario, written by herself, Miss Janis—disguised in boy's clothing—jumps into a canoe to escape the pursuing officers of the law, but the canoe upsets in midstream and she strikes out for the opposite shore.

Miss Janis, not realizing how clothes would impede her swimming, sank in the struggle; her boy's coat closed over her head, nearly smothering her, binding her arms so that she could not swim and the terrified group on shore stood paralyzed waiting for her to come up.

"It was the narrowest escape of my life," said Miss Janis afterward as she explained the accident. "I wasn't frightened, but was simply wondering how I could possibly extricate my arms so as to strike out, not spoil the picture, and incidentally not drown."

As it was, Miss Janis did herself of the impediments, struck out for the shore and finished the picture as scheduled, but the onlookers declare that it was a very cold and quite subdued girl who emerged from the icy waters, was wrapped in warm blankets and carried back to the studio, where she admitted that the seconds under the water were the longest "working hours" she had ever spent.
